Raceless Days, New Wrinkle

By EDDIE HURLEY

Raceless Mondays, a new riffle as far as the local horse racing picture is concerned, will mark the first month of racing at Suffolk Downs, where they will launch a 57-day meeting today that will start another mad betting merry-go-round, which will endure until the season closes Nov. 12 at Narragansett.

A total of 165 racing days at three tracks, with the only breathing periods these four raceless Mondays at Suffolk. As usual, Narragansett holds the winning hand with 63 racing days divided into two meetings with Rockingham getting 45 days, also for two meetings.

Boston merchants, especially will profit by raceless Mondays, a plan adopted on the west coast this winter and also used in the blue grass country of Kentucky, where horse racing has thrived for so many years. And it might be better all around if dog tracks would adopt a similar plan, although thus far, while some have favored the proposal, nothing definite has been accomplished.

Not until May 30, the first big holiday of the racing season with Suffolk Downs return to Monday racing and in the meanwhile they are faced with somewhat of a problem. The perplexing enigma concerns the taking of entries and the question of whether to take them on Saturday for Tuesday or on Monday has split the ranks of the horsemen. At the same time, it has provided another news page problem, too.

THE $5000 ADDED Plymouth Rock Handicap, a dash of six furlongs, which will find The Fighter, Clocks and Orientalist among others fighting it out for the major portion of the stake, will feature the opening day of racing, and at the track it is estimated that the crowd will soar above 30,000. And with predictions that the mutuel handle will crack all records this year, racing seldom has faced such a promising future hereabouts. Of course the outstanding feature of racing in the Old Bay State will be the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap, in which it is expected that War Admiral and Seabiscuit will renew their feud, which will be started in a special $100,000 race next month at Belmont. Owner Sam Riddle has insisted all along that War Admiral will be a certain starter in the race, while Seabiscuit no doubt will prepare for the rich event, whether he wins or loses the $100,900 Special.

Lawrin Sizzling

UNLESS CLOCKERS HAVE been misquoted again, Lawrin, winner of the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah, where he trounced a field of classy three-year-olds, will play an important part in the Kentucky Derby, to be held exactly a week from today. Clockers snapped Lawrin at a mile in 1.38 the other day, by far the most spectacular workout, not only this year, but all other years as well. In fact it is reported that never before in Derby history has there been such a sizzling trial. Unless the colt left his race on the track in that brilliant workout, it seems that he must be highly respected in the blue grass classic. Although Lawrin races with a strange gait and has been suffering from a spread hoof, he seems to have entirely recovered and as his courage never has been questioned he must take his place up there with Stagehand, Fighting Fox and Dauber as Derby possibilities.

BECAUSE RAYMOND "SONNY" Workman, the No. 1 turf citizen of Washington is riding better than ever before in his career, Bourbon King, recent surprise winner, will be held highly in the Derby. Workman has consented to accept the mount on Bourbon King, which may go to the post in the race at a juicy price. And as they've been finding out in Maryland, it's never safe to permit Workman to run loose, no matter at what price.

CONSIDER THE RESPECTIVE cases of Rollie Hemsley, the two fisted drinker of the Cleveland Indians, a catcher by trade and Ed. Smith, the southpaw pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Hemsley's story is too well known, but the case of Smith is somewhat different.

In fact, it's a strange story. He drinks too much milk and eats too much ice cream and suffers from useless poundage. Mack fights with the hurler to cut out milk and ice cream in order to keep his weight down and now threatens to suspend him unless he follows orders. And if he ever hooks up with Hemsley one of these days, anything may happen.

IT REQUIRED NINE days for the Yankees to grind out a .500 average in the American League pennant race at the start of the season, the same team that was 1-2, out and out in every bookmaker's figures in the country . . . And while those Yanks may miss Tony Lazzeri, the club never before completed so many double plays as they're making now . . . Keep your eye on Bob Carpenter, a 19-year-old rookie pitcher Travis Jackson has at Jersey City . . . The unknown kid let down the slugging Rochester club with three scattered blows and Bill Terry of the Giants already has started asking questions about the youngster . . . Take it from Horton Smith, one of the most fashionable pro golfers, the top money earning golf pro makes no more than $14,000 a year with most of them finishing in the red . . . They'll point out that it costs about $2000 to whirl around the winter golf circuit each year with no guarantees that they'll win any of the prize money . . . Henry Armstrong has quit the soothing waters of Hot Springs and pitches camp at Pompton Lakes, Monday, where he'll get into shape for his important clash with Barney Ross . . . Even the $2.30 ducats will be reserved for this show, which after all means that the little guy won't have to carry his dinner pail as he gets into line for a choice seat.

TOMMY FARR SAYS no dice to an offer of $22,500 to meet Maurice Strickland for the Empire heavyweight championship in Canada this summer.

Three Bees Hit By Stengel Axe

By JOHN BROOKS

The Bees' roster was sliced to 25 players, two above the league limit yesterday, as they set out on the first swing around the circuit after the final game of their series with the Giants at N. L. Field had been called on account of the cold.

The three players, who failed to accompany the club as it departed for Philadelphia and a two-day engagement with the Phillies, the first stop on the 17 day trip, were Frank Gabler, pitcher obtained from New York last season; Mike Balas, of Billerica, also a right-handed pitcher, and Bob Kahle, the promising young infielder, drafted from Indianapolis last fall.

All three have been ordered by Mgr. Casey Stengel to report at N. L. Field, where they will work out daily until informed of their final disposition by Bob Quinn, president of the club.

Both Quinn and Stengel emphasized, yesterday, that none of the three had been released. But that fate ultimately hangs over the head of at least one of the trio, Frank Gabler, unless he is included in a trade, which the Bees have been considering for the past week, and which may in time materialize.

The forecast release of Balas, Gabler and Kahle plus the recovery of Johnny Cooney, who reported for the first time since his confinement by a severe cold set the Bees' playing strength at 25 men, leaving Stengel with the task of disposing of two more players before the May 15 deadline, which will be reached while the Bees are engaged in a three-day series in Brooklyn, the last engagement on their road trip.

Cooney will fill a utility role at least at the start of the tour, with Max West, the powerful young rookie continuing in left field—"at least through the Philadelphia series" according to Stengel.

Errors Aid Yankees

NEW YORK, April 29.—Four Red Sox errors gave the Yankees three runs and the world's champions evened the two game series with a 6 to 4 victory over the Cronimen before a Ladies' Day crowd of 16,000 here this showery afternoon.

The Buck Bay boys battled gamely, wiping out two Yankee leads of one and three runs, respectively, but their fielding sins finally wrecked them.

Fred "Lefty" Ostermueller was the starting Boston hexman, but Jack Wilson, going to the hill in the sixth, was charged with the defeat because the Bronx Bombers put over two unearned runs to break a 4-4 tie and cinch the verdict in that frame.

Allee Donald, rookie from Newark, opened on the Yanks' slab, going wild in the fifth, when the Fenway flock scored three runs to tie the score. He retired in favor of Johnny Murphy, who added another to his long list of relief triumphs.

Wilson, making his first appearance since he sprained his leg hurling against the McCarthymen in Boston a week ago last Tuesday, allowed only one hit in three innings in going down to defeat.

That was a single by Lou Gehrig, which scored "Red" Rolfe, who had reached on a Bobby Doerr error, with one gone in the sixth. Then Bill Dickey hit a long fly which rescued Jake Powell, who had reached when Cronin fumbled his double-play roller.

The first Yankee run, in the second, was the first to be scored in 17 innings this season off Ostermueller and it was unearned. Lou Gehrig was safe at first when "Ostie," covering the bag, dropped Jimmy Foxx's throw. Larrupin Lou then took third on a single by Bill Dickey, and registered while Foxx was messing up a Selkirk roller.

Bobby Doerr knotted the count in the fourth, when he doubled to bring in Cronin, who had walked.

The Yanks chased "Ostie" in their fourth when, with two out, Powell

Promised code for Suffolk will not start until Tuesday. However, if you have new list out today, watch long shot Sleeper 8 there today. Yesterday's horse lost in a photo finish and ran second. Today Asbestos bets $10 Heel In at Churchill and $3 Miney Meyerson at Suffolk.

Inactive $16.80 was the winner we hit yesterday. This does not add to our bank roll as One Buck Benny says horse must be 8 to 1 or no bet. Bank roll $1185.

Snap Wrack, away in the first flight, gained a short lead after the start, was steadily ridden while saving ground and withstood a long drive willingly to stall off Company Halt. Lady Elgin reached the leaders on the turn, continued on the outside and was going the strongest at the end.

Hardy Jim, improved his position on the outside, made a stout bid midway of the home stretch but hung.

Kai Sou, away well but lacking speed to keep in contention early, worked her way forward on the outside, closed fast when straightened into the home stretch and drew out nicely after disposing of the leaders. Snobby Scamp entered contention swiftly nearing the turn out of the back stretch, moved to the front on the turn, continued strongly and out-stayed Miss Tiptoe. Latter, permitted to settle in her best stride before making her run, failed to find racing room when steered through on the inside rounding the final turn, came around the leaders after being eased back and was wearing the winner down gradually at the close. West Brooke went in his best form and held on well

Pay-Off Style Row Settled

By EDDIE HURLEY

The staccato notes of a bugle will launch another long New England horse racing season at Suffolk Downs today, and with indications pointing to bright weather and an opening day throng of close to 30,000 spectators, prospects are rosy for a most successful 57 days' meeting of the Eastern Racing Association.

With thoroughbreds from all quarters of the land, where they have participated in Winter racing, Suffolk Downs today is the melting pot of the racing world with stables jammed to capacity with ranking horses. Seldom in the history of the sport hereabouts has there been such an abundance of horses and while like all other tracks of the country, there is more than the usual share of cheap horses, at the same time, Suffolk seems to have drawn much more than their quota of No. 1 stake stars.

$5000 FEATURE

With no less than 11 probable starters in the opening day feature, the $5000 added Plymouth Rock Handicap, a dash of six furlongs, W. F. Morgan's The Fighter, two-time stake winner in New York recently seems highly favored to turn back a most fashionable field of sprinters.

The Fighter, 5-year-old son of Bull Dog—Bridgeen by Dominant arrived at the track early yesterday, but was not asked for any serious speed in a light workout. Mrs. Samuel Orr's Orinoco, a Supreme gelding, winner of his last two outings at Fair Grounds where he turned back Chance Ray and Moonside in swiftly won sprint events, is expected to provide the main contention in the race with L. E. Ogle's Clocks, and Mrs. E. Denemark's Finance also keenly favored in some quarters. Others in the starting field include Mrs. Frank Rossiter's Marson, which hasn't won since last July; O. L. Foster's Trouper, which may prefer a route; the 3-year-old Pumpgun from the stable of H. E. Enger; Higher Cloud, owned by Mrs. Denemark, swift but uncertain because of bad post manners; Uneasy, another from the same stable, which won only a single race last year; Buster Boy, always a local favorite, and Panther Creek, which beat Indomitable in a recent route test in Florida.

At least eight of the overnight nominees are expected to go to the post in the race.

Estimates of the opening day mutuel handle vary, as you might expect, but a glance at the 1937 figures, which clearly set forth that $295,417 was wagered on opening day last year, which occurred on a Monday indicate that the handle probably will reach $425,000 if not more. In 1937 on the first Saturday of the season, a total of $565,380 was wagered.

PROBLEM SETTLED

Eastern Racing officials late yesterday issued the following statement:

"By agreement with the State Racing Commission, reached today, the Racing Commission is to enact a regulation which is to become a part of the rules governing horse racing on all parimutuel tracks operating in Massachusetts, by which agreement all tracks will display on their totalisator boards the following:

"The amount of the pay-off on the ticket of the lowest denomination sold to the public, which in the case of Massachusetts is $2. And in addition the 'tote board' will also display the following:

"'Pay-offs computed on the basis of each $1 wagered.'"

Opening day at Suffolk will launch an innovation as far as New England racing is concerned with the stewards and placing judges operating from the peak of the press box and with the old-fashioned stewards stand completely eliminated. This will provide spectators at or near the finish line with a clear view of the finish, while the winners circle has been established near the finish line. The scales also have been set in place at the finish line, where the jockeys will weigh out after every race.

More than 50 jockeys were on hand prepared to accept mounts in the opening day's racing and included among them were some of the top ranking riders of the country as well as many former local favorites.

Indians, Feller Win, 3-2

ST. LOUIS, April 29 (AP)—Bob Feller wasn't the puzzle to the Browns he was 10 days ago but his teammate, rookie Third Baseman Ken Keltner, was poison as Cleveland nosed out St. Louis today, 3 to 2.

The Browns made eight hits off the phenomenal hurler, but nine were strikeout victims. Keltner accounted for all the Indians' runs with a fifth inning homer with Hal Trosky on base and a seventh inning single which scored Trosky who had tripled.

BOB FELLER
Third Victory

Keltner got another single in the ninth, after Trosky's third safe blow. But Rollie Hemsley hit into a double play to end the inning.

Beau Bell, Browns' slugger, slammed out three doubles off Feller after fanning his first time up.

Dizzy Injures Arm

Forced Out Of Game

CHICAGO, April 29 (AP) — Dizzy Dean, the Chicago Cubs' $185,000 plus three-player pitching acquisition, returned to the "sore arm brigade" today after starting his third game, but the Cubs defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 4, to sweep the two-game series.

Dean retired from the game after hurling three and two-third innings and allowing two hits and a walk. He said he pulled a muscle in his arm while pitching to Lou Riggs in the fourth, but that he could go on. Manager Charley Grimm, however, removed him from the game as a precaution against further injury.

Dizzy announced afterward that he expected to be able to take his regular turn on the mound.

Jack Russell, who replaced Dean, limited the Reds to two hits until the ninth. Then the Reds put on a rally and Clay Bryant had to come to the rescue for the second successive day.

The Cub attack included only eight hits, but three were homers by Gabby Hartnett, Tony Lazzeri and Augie Galan

Robert Wins Mat Bout

By S. J. MAHONEY

Yvon Robert, former champion of the world, convinced 6000 persons at the Garden last night that he is still a contender as a result of his victory over Louis Thesz, St. Louis, in a three-fall battle.

After twenty-seven minutes 34 seconds of wrestling in the first bout Thesz threw Robert using a headlock to pin the Canadian.

In the next joust Robert dazed the multitude by his remarkable speed. He won the fall in 2 minutes and one second after obtaining an arm grapevine bar which he used to whirl Thesz around the ring. The head of the St. Louis man came in contact with the floor as he was reeled about and he was dazed at the end of the bout.

The third and deciding fall was scored by Robert in 10 minutes 32 seconds with a crotch hold and slam. Twice prior to the deciding fall Robert hurled his opponent to the mat by the crotch system.

The contest was full of exciting features and it was evident to the throng that each was in a desperate frame of mind because of the calibre of the encounter. The victor was to be the choice of Paul Bowser for a world's championship match with Steve Casey and as a result of this each did his utmost to pave the way for a victory.

One of the surprises of the evening was the quick defeat of Charley Strack by Wladyslaw Talun of Poland. The time was 3 minutes 50 seconds, the shortest bout in which Strack has engaged in Boston.

George Clark and Marvin Westenberg gave a thrilling exhibition which resulted in a draw at the end of 20 minutes.

Maurice Robert, Montreal, and Frank Gilardo, Italy, wrestled 15 minutes to a draw.

Dr. Freddie Meyers, Chicago, was tossed by Pietro Gobbo, Italy, 7 minutes, 7 seconds, headlock and body press. Chief Osley Saunooke, Cherokee Indian, pinned Joe Swan, Boston, top body press, 9 minutes, 34 seconds.

Seelie Samara, Algeria, pinned Sheriff Tom Hanley, Oklahoma, 14 minutes, 47 seconds.

Hans Steinke, Germany, threw Pat Reilly, Texas, 15 minutes, reverse body and double leg lock.

DI MAGGIO MAKES 1938 DEBUT TODAY

NEW YORK, April 29 (AP)—Joe DiMaggio's 1938 debut in a New York Yankee uniform will be made tomorrow when the world champions open a series with the Washington Senators.

DiMaggio, who ended a prolonged holdout campaign two days after the season opened, will play centerfield and bat third as usual.

DiMaggio took another long workout today and reported himself in good shape except for tender and blistered hands.

4:10.6 Mile Wins Relay

Twin Stars At Penn

PHILADELPHIA, April 29 (AP)—North Texas Teachers College, with Blaine Rideout running the anchor mile in 4 minutes 10.6 seconds, today broke all records for the distance medley relay as it covered the distance in 9:59.4, to win one of the feature events of the Penn relay carnival.

Columbia University's sprint relay team, anchored by I. C. 4-A Champion Ben Johnson, won the quarter-mile college relay championship. The fleet New Yorkers—Herb Weast, Jack McMahon, Archie Sheetan and Johnson—won in 41.7 seconds.

Yale, with Gardiner Millett running anchor, was less than a yard behind, followed by the Xavier University quartet of New Orleans, coached by Ralph Metcalfe, and Cornell. Navy was disqualified for faulty baton passing.

Columbia added another title as Francis Ryan, husky national end 1. C. 4-A champion, took the shot put with a relay record heave of 51 feet 6¼ inches. Bill Watson of Michigan, second with 51 feet 2¾, also bettered the previous mark of 50 feet 2¾, set in 1935 by Don Eiser of Notre Dame.

Bill Faymonville of Notre Dame, third in the shot, won the discus with a toss of 157 feet 3½ inches, wiping off the books the 1935 performance of 151 feet 5¾ inches by Anton Kishen of Bates.

Don Kinde of Duke University and Altoona, Pa., winner of his 120-yard invitation high hurdles heat in 14.9 seconds, cut a tenth of a second off that time in taking the final with a two-foot margin over Frank Fuller of Virginia.

Jack Donovan of Dartmouth, outdoor 4-A champion and favorite, ran third after barely missing elimination in the trials.

John Borican, a surprise contender from Virginia State, came home the winner of the 400-meter hurdles race. Clocked in 53.6, three-tenths slower than the relay mark, he won by a yard from John Nevius of Cornell.

beat out a bunt, Gehrig walked. Dickey doubled, Hoag walked and Selkirk singled.

The Sox, again paced by Doerr, roared right back to knot the count again in their fifth.

Foxx and Cronin, first two up, walked. Higgins put a damper on the rally by splashing into a double play but Chapman drew a pass and took second on a passed ball.

Here Doerr came through with a single to knock in two runs.

Then Nonnenkamp, batting for Berg, walked and Peacock, pinch-hitting, greeted Murphy with a single which made the score 4 all.

The Yanks outhit the Sox, 8 to 6, with Lou Gehrig getting two hits in a game for the first time this year.

It was the first time in the history of the Yankees' stadium that ladies' day was observed and more than 12,000 of the fair sex turned out despite the inclement weather.

The Sox caught a 6 o'clock train for Boston where they open a long stay tomorrow against the Athletics.

Oft-Saved Killer Dies Puffing Cigar

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., April 30 (AP)—Calmly smoking a cigar, John W. Vaughn stood in state prison death house early today for the second time, recited the Lord's prayer, bitterly indicted society, then went to the electric chair.

He died at 12:33 for slaying a San Antonio policeman.

She execution climaxed a spectacular series of delays that began eight days ago when the electric chair generator broke down.

Vaughn called that an "act of God." The execution was reset for Friday, but Vaughn's attorney obtained a last minute injunction on plea for a sanity hearing.

PUFFS AND PRAYS

The attorney said Vaughn had been driven insane by three hours of listening to workmen repairing the generator. The injunction was dissolved yesterday.

Vaughn entered the death chamber smoking his cigar and clasping a Bible and three roses—"my funeral bouquet."

"Gentlemen," he said, "I'd like to say the Lord's Prayer."

He bowed his head and repeated the prayer. Then he straightened and pointed to the chair.

"As I told you before, when I was here last week with death standing behind me," he said, "you are going to see an innocent man executed.

PREACHER ALSO EXECUTED

"Those of you who were here last night saw another innocent man die, a colored fellow who 'celled' next to me on death row and prayed with me."

He referred to Johnny Banks, negro preacher, who was executed for slaying a 13-year-old girl.

Spectators began to fidget.

"I know the people in this room are under a terrible strain," Vaughn continued, "but it is nothing to the strain I've been under."

WOULD DESTROY CHAIR

He drew on his cigar, twirled the rose. Warden Ward said, "It's time."

"Just a minute, warden," Vaughn pleaded. "The law says I die between midnight and dawn, and I'd like a few more puffs of this cigar. I want to make a real speech."

He puffed again, then continued—

"I hope that my death will destroy what is destroying me—the electric chair. These men here would not harm a hair on my head if it was left to them.

"There's no doubt this chair was built for criminals. Tonight you see a man who is not a criminal—not a murderer. I would not be standing here now and making my peace with my Maker by telling a lie if I were guilty."

Baering Down on the News

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Hank Ford should know what he is talking about when he says we are on the spot. He took many a man for a ride.

Henry's after-dinner speech of 30 words was bogie for the course. It was shorter than ant legs, contained more meat than the Chicago stock yards and came to the point like a Vandyke chinstrap.

He can get more mileage out of a nod than a long-winded orator can out of a dictionary. We agree with Hank that coat tails were invented so speakers can be pulled back into their chairs.

Coogan Lawyers Probe Big Losses

Deals Branded 'Sensational'

LOS ANGELES, April 30 (INS)—Emerging from a probe of the financial mysteries of Jackie Coogan Productions, Inc., attorneys for "The Kid" declared today that the total of his earnings as a child movie star was nearer $2,225,000 than the four million dollars he supposed.

Sensational losses in certain transactions of the company were said by the attorneys to have been disclosed by their first day of auditing of Coogan Productions records.

Coogan's attorneys, William Rains and Frank Doherty, declared they were going "to probe further into these interesting discoveries."

A specific losing transaction disclosure that aroused "The Kid's" indignation, attorneys said, was the entry showing that a San Diego ranch bought by the late Josn Coogan, Jackie's father, was sold after his death at a loss of $119,000.

"Why, that ranch cost $159,000 and it was sold for $40,000," declared Jackie, who is suing his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bernstein, for an accounting of the four million dollars he claimed to have earned as a child actor.

"That's the sort of thing I want looked into. There are probably more things like that."

Police, Holdup Victims to View Malden Suspect

Police of Malden, Medford, Everett and Melrose and victims of holdups in those communities were scheduled today to view Hilliam B. Dodge, 25, of Ashford road, Allston, caught in Malden square yesterday after an alleged attempted holdup of a finance company.

For months police have sought a bandit with a "reversible coat" operating in that area. Through such a coat Dodge was captured. He was booked on a charge of assault with attempt to rob.

On the pretense of obtaining a loan, a bandit appeared in the Household Finance Corporation office on Main street, Maiden, and confronted the manager, Ralph W. Medlin, with a gun.

Medlin and a girl clerk, Miss Lillian Floyd, 23, fled through a private door into an adjoining office. The bandit, after attempting to gain entrance, ran to the street, reversing his coat and ripping off adhesive plaster from the upper part of his face.

A few minutes later Miss Floyd told police she saw the bandit, whom she identified by his coat collar, walking in Malden square. Dodge was then trapped in a drugstore telephone booth.

Fractured Leg? Poof! He Works

An "artiste" is supposed to be a softie, according to all the rules of he-men.

But George McFadden, of Winchester, is an exception to the rule.

Did someone say the exception proves the rule?

Anyhow, George is a scenic designer and, as this particular sad rule goes, the scenery fell on George.

As a result he suffered a fracture of the left leg.

But a good man cannot be downed. So George is designing right on the flat of his back.

We mean it. He has been at the Winchester Hospital for five weeks. And that leg is now in a plaster cast—but still George works.

McFadden is also in the theatrical game. And has been associated with the Repertory Theater and the Leland Powers school.

So he has learned the show must go on.

HIS BED HIS WORKSHOP—George McFadden, Winchester, scene designer, suffered fractured leg when staging fell on him. Once injured limb was set George rigged up improvised easel in Winchester Hospital bed and got right back on job. Here he's seen doing his bit, despite handicap, so curtain can rise on time.

One for the Judge

Greenfield, April 30—Charged with fishing without a license, John T. Gadomski, of Ashfield, today was prepared to wage a fight at his court appearance next week. Game Warden Albert Farrell said Gadomski found a number of trout marooned in "potholes" in the Deerfield River and scooped them out with his hands.

16 in Vast Dope Ring Indicted

NEW YORK, April 30 (INS)—Sixteen members of a vast alleged interstate dope "ring," which government agents said controlled "enough to manufacture 30,000,000,000 marijuana cigarettes," stood indicted here today by a federal grand jury.

Authorities said G-men had confiscated two "dope" factories, 15,000 tons of the narcotic weed and have established a patrol guard about an eight-town area in Minnesota where the alleged syndicate established its production source.

The "ring" smuggled 150,000 narcotic cigarettes, or "reefers," into the Harlem area here every three weeks, Marx said, and the group assertedly was financed by New York and Chicago racketeers.

PATROLMAN RESIGNS

Patrolman Chester A. Guilford of the Mattapan station, ill for two years, today resigned from the Boston police force. He gained an enviable record as a young patrolman through a number of lone captures of bandits.

New England Trade Expected To Hold Steady

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Financial Editor

The trade outlook for the New England area in coming weeks runs from uncertain to stable. While important industries are currently operating on greatly reduced schedules there is some expectation of a slight textile pickup and shoe and leather prospects are considered as improved.

• • •

Yarn markets supply our cue on textiles. Greater buying interest is being shown in woolen and worsteds, more buyers are reported for cottons and rayons are more active at slightly higher prices. The story on the shoe industry is told by fairly large hide and skin sales and the changing hands of large quantities of sole leather.

Stocks Irregular

The stock market took on an irregular tone today in one of the slowest Saturday sessions of the year. Price changes for the most part were limited to fractions.

CONSUMERS GOODS

Since consumer goods industries are usually the first to shake off depression, and head up the comeback trail, it seems a wise policy to watch New England's shoe and leather, cotton and woolen textile activity. They are this section's important manufactured products and as they go it is quite likely general business activity is preparing to go.

• • •

Notebook: We are told that a further curbing of oil output is necessary because of reduced demand . . . Already there are persistent reports of price concessions being granted . . . A dollar a barrel for crude would make a severe dent in earnings of some companies . . . Such a price average for 1938 would bring per share net off from 30 to 73 per cent, according to one compilation we have seen.

• • •

FIGHTING FOR RISE

Stock market bulls are fighting hard for their cause and they may be able to keep a rally going into the early sessions of next week, but we do not think it should be followed. Minor rallies at this time are of no importance and the thing for investors to remember is that they must keep sufficiently liquid to take advantage of later long term buying opportunities.

• • •

Two confidential advisory services that we have seen—both have a fine accuracy record—are looking for a lower price level ultimately, although granting an irregular rise is now a possibility. If it takes place and Douglas Aircraft should get up into the 44-46 zone again we suggest profits be taken on all aircraft issues, our only buying recommendation in months outside of a specialty or two.

Haney Hits Wage Bill Demerits

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University
Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, April 30—Baltimore asks:

"What are the merits of the present wages and hours bill?"

The demerits far exceed the merits.

The great evil of the thing is that it puts the federal government further into centralized, collectivist control of industry.

One thing leads to another, and in due course, all prices would have to be fixed. There are wage "differentials" on top of minimum wages. When the minimum is fixed, therefore, many of these higher wages must be raised, too. Then prices have to be raised. Then sales decline, and unemployment grows.

If the differential wages above the minimum are levelled down, more laborers may be hurt than are helped.

• • •

Yonkers asks:

"Do you think that the women's movement against the New Deal spending program will do any good?"

It may do great good. The typical American women is a great budget balancer. The spending program has the bad effect of fastening the control of the central government on our necks. It will give the Roosevelt-Farley machine billions of dollars to spend just before election, thus allowing a continuation of the wasteful and futile policies.

Atlanta, Ga., asks:

"Isn't the National Labor Relation board just a means of forcing the CIO on industry? Isn't the CIO a Communist organization?"

Unquestionably, the NLRB and the Wagner Act have greatly helped the CIO. The Act and the Board are strongly biased in favor of radical labor organization. Probably, however, neither was intended to be as one-sided as has turned out to be the case.

The CIO cannot be fairly called a Communist organization; but there are many Communists in it and it has fostered radical ideas and tactics in line with Communism.

Actress Seeks 5 Million in Suit

LOS ANGELES, April 30 (AP)—Eloise Spann, 21-year-old singing actress, filed suit against Milton Beecher, charging assault and asking damages of $5,000,000.

In her complaint, she said she was summoned to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, named a co-defendant, August 26, 1936, for a film test and that Beecher, who escorted her home, attacked her.

AFL Accuses Labor Board of Power Abuse

WASHINGTON, April 30 (INS)—The American Federation of Labor accused the National Labor Relations Board of usurpation of authority and mal-administration of the Wagner Labor Act in a complaint prepared by its general counsel, Joseph A. Padway.

President William Green, meantime, announced the A.F.L.'s acquirement of an interest in the Chicago Federation of Labor's radio station WCFL for use as a propaganda weapon in expanding the newly chartered Progressive Miners' Union to fight the United Mine Workers, a mainstay of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Wm. Green

Padway charged the NLRB has "gone far afield" by:

"Invalidating existing contracts between employers and labor unions.

"Directing employers not to enter contracts because a complaint was pending.

"Ordering employers to abstain from recognizing the union of a majority of employes because charges have been filed by a rival union.

"Setting aside the choice of a majority of the workers registered in an election held and supervised by the board's own staff.

"Calling formal hearings tending to disrupt existing contractual relations between an employer and the union representing a majority of employes merely because a rival union has filed a petition for a hearing."

TAXES! TAXES! TAXES!

"TAX" comes from the Latin, tangere, which means to touch. The average workingman who applauds any tax that touches those of a higher income than himself fails to realize he is also touched through unseen taxes.

Those unseen taxes touch the average workingman and his family proportionately heavier than those of higher income.

Suppose we observe the average married man with a family of children, whose income is not large, who occupies a rented home, who believes he pays the tax collector nothing, because he does not pay taxes either on income or real estate.

If he owns an automobile, he pays four cents on every gallon of gasoline he uses in it.

If he pays $600 for his automobile, he pays a federal sales tax of $18.00 in hidden taxes.

If he purchases one package of cigarettes daily, he pays $21.90 in hidden taxes yearly.

If he buys one quart of liquor each month, he pays $6 in hidden taxes.

If he buys a new suit of clothes, he absorbs 12 different hidden taxes.

On every loaf of bread he buys, there are no less than 49 different hidden taxes.

If he pays $400 a year in rent, he pays $160 in hidden taxes.

The average workingman whether he likes it or not works approximately 10 weeks in each year for the government.

How Poor Briton Fares In the Tax Dog House

LONDON, April 30 (AP)—Britain's average "Charley Citizen" with a $2500 a year job in a city office, a wife, two children and a $4000 suburban home works two months each year for the government.

Professional calculators estimated today that he pays one-sixth of his income in taxes, figuring in recently announced increases in income and other taxes.

For a start the government takes $50 annual income tax.

Another $60 based on the "rated" value of his home is assessed.

Local government authorities take about $125 in "rates"—local taxes to maintain police, streets, poorhouses.

On top of that comes the water "rate" averaging $10 annually.

The early morning cup of tea his wife brings him in bed is already taxed liked the cigarette he smokes while dressing and the match he uses to light it.

But he has the patriotic satisfaction of knowing that one-fourth of the 48 cents a pound he pays for tea goes partly to buy airplanes, guns and battleships.

At breakfast time the radio music reminds him he pays $2.50 yearly for the privilege of owning a "wireless" set. And so it goes on throughout the day.

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Churches of Christ, Scientist, throughout the world on Sunday.

Star Studded Radio Time From Hollywood Tonight

By N. F. T.

IF YOU'VE HAD pesty static disturbances when you dialed the last day or so—it's been electric flashes in the air. Should be cleared up now.

Late hockey-players from the sheets and pillows can have colorful listening (WEEI) from midnight into tomorrow's wee hours when KNX of Hollywood holds forth for a gala opening on the coast to coast waves tonight.

Martha Raye

Such network notables as Al Jolson, Martha Raye, Cecil B. De Millie, Eddie Cantor, Edward G. Robinson, Jean Hersholt, Joe Penner, Frank Parker, the Raymond Paige orchestra and others will help to make the show and station a standout.

Picked for the "New Voices" singing spot (WEEI) each Thursday morning, Sally La Marr must send some wires to her home town, meaning Philly, so her folks and friends can earcup. She is the Fox and Hounds songstress that has clicked unmistakably hereabouts.

INDEED IT IS!

These ears relish "One Man's Family" drama (WNAC) stagings on Wednesday evenings, but notice the word "Indeed" being worn threadbare in the script.

Slants on spoken word success the main topic tonight at the festivities behind Copley-Plaza Hotel walls, with WMEX wafting between 9 and 10 p.m.

A chap on the West Coast, his name slips me now, which makes no never mind, says the way to be a successful radio producer is, "Don't Try to Run the Show," but "Just Direct It," and insists there's a big difference.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Mae West management states her memorable "Adam and Eve" sketch commanded the biggest air audience ever etherized.

Also stands strongly on the assertion, despite suggestions that the King's abdication address from London and President Roosevelt's bank holiday broadcast, not to mention Lionel Barrymore as "Scrooge" at Christmas time and even George Arliss doing "Disraeli" enjoyed loudspeaker patronage not likely equalled by Mae's much publicized performance.

Fred Allen meeting Jack Benny to climax their "feud" didn't do badly, either.

When it comes to golf, studio stars who work where Chet Lauck and Tuffy Goff do their "Lum and Abner" stuff out Hollywood way are wagering that the pair will easily top the best of the broadcasting golfers when the current tournament holes to a close next week.

A subscriber postcards that he likes Lowell Thomas for the way he says "So Long Until Tomorrow," but that might not be exactly a compliment.

Babe Ruth reported receiving propositions having to do with reporting the World Series, come fall. There are worse voices, if the Bambino can spiel what he sees smartly.

Boston After Dark

By GEORGE HOLLAND

JOTTINGS: Mae West and Police Commissioner Timilty liked one another at first sight . . . Major Ralph W. Robart, of the parole board, was also among those present at a party thrown jointly by Miss West and Divisional Manager Charles W. Koerner of the Keith forces . . . The major finally caught up with your correspondent, although the delayed meeting was not because this critic of the parole board was trying to duck . . . Major Robart has greyed considerably since taking the parole job . . . "It has aged me," he admitted . . . If you remember, it has been this column's consistent contention that the custom of the parole board in meting out "maximums" was the chief cause of unrest among the state's convict population . . . We are wrong, according to the Major . . . He presents some arguments to prove it, too.

George Holland

For instance the present parole board can justify its policy in figures which show that 85 per cent of paroled felons have made good "on the outside"... These figures have been reached over a comparatively short period of time, necessarily . . . If thy stand up, the Massachusetts board will maintain a reputation as No. 1 among the various commonwealths . . . To this column's charge that the boarrd has set itself up as "a super-court," Major Robart answered that he and his fellow-members study case histories of the inmates more exhaustively than the judges who sentence them . . . which can be true.

Getting back to Miss West—because it was her party that brought together so many "interesting people" (including some reporters), she is firm in her decision to become "Catherine the Great" on Broadway next season.

But here's the punch behind the blank announcement of that story, which has been itemed in other columns . . . What producer do you suppose is negotiating for the services of Miss West? . . . None other than that august group, The Theater Guild, my dear . . . Tsk, tsk!

Once Over Lightly:

Mayor Tobin photographs generally as if he were wearing at least one black eye . . . It is just an idiosyncracy of the mayor's features when exposed to a lens . . . Executive Councilor Daniel H. Coakley is at the Carney—for a checkup. Nothing serious, the m. d.'s say . . .

Good conduct relief legislation, giving convicts who are not eligible for parole five days off a month's durance for exemplary behavior, will sail through the Legislature . . . The number combinations getting the biggest plays in Boston are based on the first three digits, 945, of Richard Whitney's official number . . . It missed coming up by one figure the other day when 045 was the pay-off . . . Young Buddy Lewis, who plays the piano and harmonizes with Sally Vine at Rose Chapman's Congo, seems to have a voice which might fit a microphone . . . And the Vine girl's pipes carry some very liquid and thrilling tones, too.

Phil Bucola, the boxing manager, takes off today for Europe. Dan Carroll journeyed to the Big Town to see Phil sail . . . Michael Todd, producer of "The Man From Cairo," will leave some admiring friends, particularly in the ranks of the waiters' union, when he pulls stakes for New York tonight . . . The young producer dined nightly at Dinty Moore's and took rank as one of the most liberal tippers of the season . . . Joseph Myron, the artist-poet bartender, has quit his chair of mixology at Dinty's, leaving the song and dance monologist, Charles Lane, as senior at the stick. Myron is selling gin, with a roving commission.

Charles "Chick" Robinson of South Boston and Back Bay, who pulled through a tough tussle with a strepto throat, saw his first ball game in two seasons Friday. He was stricken last summer . . . If Malcim E. Nichols trys for a state office, politicians are wondering whether the astute Timothy Murphy of Jamaica Plain will be in the Nichols corner again . . . It was Murphy who maneuvered the removals of Manser and Cook from the mayoral polling . . . Murphy has received a bid, this column hears, to handle the Leverett Saltonstall in Boston . . . But he's an admirer of both Candidates Hurley and Kelly . . . The political jousting will start to get vehement again soon.

Chatter:

For the first time, excluding New Year's Eve, there were two midnight shows in Boston this morning...The Old Howard had the turnstiles clicking merrily with Hinda Wassau as the attraction, and the Keith-Boston sold out with Mae West...Miss West denies, even to her friend and Manager Jim Timony, that she was ever the bride of the gentleman who permits himself to be advertised, "Mr. Mae West"...For a possible entertaining biography, the life story of the same Timony affords subject-matter in abundance...He resembles Jim Farley a bit in appearance, and has many of that individual's winning qualities...Timony operates tht famous Hollytowne Theater in the movie capital...It was there Michael Whalen was discovered... The theater is wired for sound, and when the manager is in the mood he turns on the sound effects and baffles both audience and actors... The sound effects include steam-engine sounds, fire whistles and bombs...

When he feels jocular, Proprietor Timony gives his technicians "the office," and the sound-effects go on full blast . . . This happened throughout the crucial scene of Playwright Paul Gerard Smith's "Let's Get Together" . . . With half of the producers in Hollywood trying to follow the play . . . Jim has grown rich and portly since he steered Earl Carroll through a hectic few seasons on Broadway . . . But the size of his hat hasn't grown with his wealth and fame.

Morenon-Leland Ceremony Today

By BETTY ALDEN

ELIZABETH LELAND and Ernest Morenon, who are being married this afternoon, haven't decided where they want to live . . . but one thing is certain, whether they select a home here or in France, the house must have a good sized studio . . . Both the bride and bridegroom are talented sculptors and spend a great deal of their time modelling in clay, making plaster casts, wood carvings and pursuing the other phases of the sculptors' art . . .

Mr. Morenon, who hails from Paris, France, won the Prix de Rome for sculpture in 1933 . . . and Elizabeth has had a "one-man" show of her excellent likenesses of people at the Junior League and a Coolidge Corner Gallery . . .

Following her artistic talent into the realm of color blending, as well as sculpture, she has selected a color scheme of rose and white for her wedding in the Brookline home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund F. Leland . . . Her gown is an empire model of ivory satin with a tulle veil held in place by a coronet of twisted tulle, and her bouquet is of calla lilies . . .

Her sister, Mrs. James Weir of Cleveland, the only attendant, is wearing a net gown shading from pale pink to deep burgundy, with a cluster of crushed roses in her hair and an old-fashioned bouquet of azaelias and carnations . . .

Rev. Charles E. Park is officiating, John Davis Leland, brother of the bride, is the best man and, owing to the simplicity of the occasion, there are no ushers . . . The John Lelands and the Oliver Lelands combined forces last evening in giving a dinner dance in honor of the bridal couple . . .

The bride's mother is wearing a corsage of yellow daisies to match the flowers printed on her black gown . . . and her hat is a dressy black straw . . . The bride was educated at Miss Winsor's and Miss Hall's and the bridegroom, who is the son of Pierre Morenon of Marseilles, is a graduate of the Ecole de Beaux Arts in Paris . . .

Dedhamites have already had several meetings to draw up plans for the forthcoming show . . . George Rice is again chairman of the executive committee . . . and some of his aides are Mrs. David Maynard, who is allotting boxes to subscribers; Mrs. Charles Bartlett, Mrs. Nelson Lee and Mrs. Eldon MacLeod, who are selecting prizes; Mrs. Joseph Russell, who has charge of placing posters; Mrs. Lawrence Lombard and Mrs. Francis Marsh, 2d, who, as publicity directors, are spreading news of the show far and wide . . .

Snowflake Cool

By ANNICE BRINK

DECLARE your independence in the face of hot weather . . . wear white flowered prints that scatter like snowflakes on a bright or a dark ground . . . for instance, this jacket suit in which Virginia Wilson scans the black tablet on which the Declaration of Independence is graven. Touches of white pique on the collar not only set off a pretty chin-line, but when the jacket is removed they make the frock a complete and charming thing in itself. Its sleeves are shorter than those of the jacket. The jacket is a slim little thing with tailored revers and a slightly bloused back. This is a find in the budget class (under eight dollars, sizes 11 to 17) and is grand with a luggage tan ground or a lighter-than-navy-blue. For shopping information, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston American.

"Spite Love" Brings Tears

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

So many of us deliberately seek unhappiness! We know we are making serious mistakes. Yet we fling ourselves headlong into trouble!

That is the very thing Jane K. of Roxbury is doing. But, before you hear more from me, read her letter, just as she writes it:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There is a difference of 18 years between my husband's age and mine, which accounts for his insane jealousy, coldness and lack of appreciation of me. He never takes me any place or pays me a compliment, and he's always rushing back at unexpected times to see if he can find me with someone else.

I put up with this treatment for years, and as he was always accusing me of seeing and sneaking out with other men, I came to the conclusion I might as well have the game as the name.

So I forced myself to take interest in another man, who is as unhappy in his marriage as I am in mine. No my husband has never caught us, in spite of his rushing home, we never see each other at home. Our meeting place is absolutely safe.

The man has three children, so he does not wish to divorce his wife. I have no children. My husband who is well-to-do wants me to go with him, to another city, where he has been offered a position as manager, but I have declined to go, because I would miss seeing my sweetheart.

He threatens divorce. If I don't go with him. My sweetheart says he cannot marry me, even if I am free. JANE K.

My Dear Jane:

There is such a thing as falling in love for spite, my dear girl, and such love affairs are apt to turn out badly.

The married man with whom you are having [illegible] affair tells you flatly he will not marry you even if you get a divorce.

Watch your step, and be very sure that the way you THINK you feel about your husband is an exact gauge of your true feelings.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FLOWERS FOR MOTHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We are not engaged, but I believe we're headed that way. Her mother has a birthday in a few weeks and I should like to send her some flowers. If it would be the right thing to do. HOPEFUL.

MY DEAR SON:

I would be very courteous and tactful for you to send some flowers to the young lady's mother on her birthday.

It's good tactics always to get on the right side of their mothers, when one is headed that way."

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Mothers' Day Gift of Beauty

By ARLINE GOULD

OLD-FASHIONED sentimental mothers and brisk, breezy, modern ones alike go for the spicy scent of carnations . . . we don't know why. But it seems to mean romantic memories for one, and express a zest in life for the other!

Surprising how the sachet has come back in fashion. Certainly the big, fat silken pads have no resemblance to the unobtrusive little bags whose faint odor failed like a Victorian heroine, and dwindled to nothing in a matter of weeks.

Now you can find sachets which will have their fragrance strongly defined even in a year! And certainly there's nothing more unobtrusive than having nighties and hankies and all lacy stuff exuding sweetness.

We've found some awfully nice carnation sachets that make a grand Mothers' Day gift. And a tenfold concentrated carnation perfume that is a gift prize you should know about anyway. It is one of a group of concentrated flower odors which do a beautiful job of keeping you smelling like your favorite blossom all day long. They come in soaring cylinders of glass set in a white and gold cylinder package.

Brand new is a favorite French soap in carnation odor, such a dainty and refreshing thing to keep in the bathroom, so lovely hands can wave a whiff of spice-sea as they move!

If you'd like shopping information on these new carnation finds—the sachets the tenfold carnation perfume and the French soap which has just come out with a carnation odor, all of these medium-priced, phone Arline Gould, Liberty 4000 week days until 5, or write her at the Boston American inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Ideal Luncheon For Summertime

By MARTHA LEE

Salads arranged in layers suggest the finished touch of a chef, and while simple enough to prepare present a sophisticated effect.

They can be made either with gelatine or without and for a minimum amount of effort they will produce a good looking product suitable for supper or luncheon purposes.

The Pressed Chicken Loaf is ideal for the spring or summer luncheon, especially when served with potato chips and a hot vegetable. It, as well as a refrigerator dessert, can be made the evening before and allowed to chill over night. This leaves very little to be done the following day when you are rushed for time.

INVITATION FORM

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am planning an early Spring wedding. There will be no reception. Therefore should I have invitations printed inviting our relatives and friends to the church, or should I send notes?

If you suggest notes, how should they be worded? Or should my mother write the notes? She is a widow. MARY.

You don't tell me quite enough for me to answer your question definitely. Is your church wedding to be a formal one, or an informal one? If it is to be formal . . . that is, if you are to wear the traditional wedding gown and bridal veil, with all the other plans consistent with this formality. . . then you would send formal engraved invitations to the church ceremony.

But if it is to be informal notes of invitation are appropriate. And preferably these notes of invitation would be written by your mother, since she is to be hostess of the occasion. Their wording might be like this:

DEAR JANE,

Mary and Clifford are to be married on Wednesday, the first of March, in the —— Church, at four o'clock, and it would make us all happy if you and Tom would be with us at the ceremony.

They are not to have a reception, and so they are especially eager to have the relatives and such close friends as you and Tom with them at the church.

Dearest love from us all.

Affectionately,

HELPS EYEBROWS

If you have tweezed your eyebrows so there's no fuzz left you can coax back the growth by anointing the pretty arches with mineral oil, picking up the flesh and pinching it vigorously. This treatment arouses blood streams, tones tissues and acts favorably upon the tiny fibers in which the furzers rest. More normal eyebrows are the fashion now. We're sick and tired of the mere shadow that makes the face vapid and mask-like.

Planning Your Wedding

Your wedding day. Will it be as perfect as you dreamed? Settle budgeting, etiquette details at the start and the simplest wedding—even one quickly planned—will be lovely.

First question is, who pays for what? The bride and her family provide her trousseau, of course. They send invitations or announcements. They pay for music and the sexton's services; provide floral decorations; arrange for cars for the bridal party. The wedding breakfast or reception is also given by the bride's family.

Much shorter is the groom's list. He cares for the minister's fee, buys ring, license and the bride's bouquet. Usually he gives the bride a piece of jewelry, the only ornament she wears. Often he sends a corsage to the bride's mother and his own.

Should the bride buy her attendants' costumes? Only their bouquets. But the thoughtful bride selects dresses within their means which they can wear later on. She frequently buys their hats or slippers as gifts.

And now for the wedding itself. Who leads going up the aisle? The ushers. Then come the bridesmaids, the maid of honor, the flower girls and last the bride and her father.

At the reception, who has the first dance with the bride? The groom. When the bridal couple is seated for supper, the groom is on the bride's left, the best man on her right.

Still more points you must be sure about! Our 40-page booklet, How to Plan Your Wedding, tells what's correct for simple weddings, formal weddings. Bride, groom, attendants, guests.

Send 15c for our booklet, How to Plan Your Wedding, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Rosalind Arrested In Dance Hall Riot

CHAPTER 18

Blatant music shrieked from the Red Slipper. Parking her car, Rosalind went in and pushed her way through the throng that stood in the doorway. "Let me by!" she cried sharply. When a man at the entrance of the dance floor asked for her ticket, she retorted, "I'm not staying. I'm looking for my husband."

Had she ever danced in this hideous place? She saw the same crowd, the same cheap dresses. Her eyes roamed over the room. A boy she had known in high school touched her arm. "Well, if it isn't Mrs. Astor!" and went off, laughing derisively.

Then she saw Van dancing with a tall blonde girl dressed in white. A girl from the Hills, slumming! Felice! Van had brought her! Too furious and jealous to notice how bored Van looked, she pushed her way through the crowd, thinking only one thing, one thing, to get him away.

When he saw her he stopped and several other dancing couples stopped still.

"Rosalind, what are you doing here?"

"I came after you!" And then turned her blazing eyes on the girl in white with him. "I heard you call him. Take your hands off him! He's my husband."

Van cried, "Have you lost your mind to make a scene like this?"

A couple dancing by accidentally collided with them. Van, beside himself with rage and embarrassment, struck the boy and sent him sprawling. Then a friend of the injured boy struck Van and knocked him against another dancing couple.

OFF TO JAIL!

In a moment it was bedlam. Girls shrieked and ran for the entrance. The music stopped. The manager, running to stop them, was cut by a hurled bottle that splintered against his shoulder.

A waiter called the police. Arriving in the midst of the brawling they seized the worst offenders. And the waiter who had called pointed to Rosalind. "She started it!"

An officer said, "Come along, sister. You're going, too."

"You can't take me! I'm Mrs. Van Howard."

He grinned. "Oh, can't I? I don't care who you are. You started a riot. You're going for a ride, too. Better come quietly."

She put her hands to her face and sobbed. But it was too late. Too late. Van, his coat torn, his mouth bleeding, looked at her with hate.

• • •

The postman grinned at Constance as he stepped from the porch. Warm rain had just begun to fall and the large drops dotted the sidewalk.

She had looked through the mail when she saw the sleek black car stop and the next moment saw Gordon walk to her through the rain.

He stood very still and a hundred questions rushed through her mind. Had he come back for her? And her first impulse was to go inside and refuse to see him because she knew that with his hand upon her, his eyes looking into hers, and his deep voice tender, she would have no strength but to go with him.

Every day and every night she had fought against loving him. She had fought against it as if it were a disease a cure for which she alone must find.

"Hello, Gordon."

He pulled off his hat and looked down on her, almost forgetting for a moment why he had come. Then, frowning, he asked, "Don't you read the morning paper, Constance?"

SHOCKING NEWS

"The morning paper? Why, no. We don't have it delivered. Why?"

She didn't know! He spoke gently. "I'd like to see your parents. I'm afraid I'm not a bearer of very good tidings."

Leading the way inside, she went upstairs to call her mother. As usual in the summer after school closed, her father had taken a temporary position.

Mother and daughter came into the living room together.

Gordon's dark eyes shifted from one to the other, from the mother in her clean housedress to the vivid Constance in a blue smock.

Then he said, "I've shocking news for you, Mrs. Darby," and saw something terrible happen to her face when he told her of the scene last night in the Red Slipper, of Rosalind and Van and specifically, again, and that Nina Howard ill from the shock and humiliation had sent him.

Only in time of death in the family had Constance ever seen her mother look like this. Between sobs all that Ruth could say was, "She spoiled her chance! She spoiled her chance!"

"There's a hearing before the magistrate this morning," he said. "Would you like to come with me, Constance? It's rotten that you have to be dragged into something as sordid as this."

Ruth said, "Yes, please go, dear. One of us must be there. I can't go. I couldn't bear to see her there."

In her room Constance changed hurriedly from the smock into a dark dress and a wide-brimmed black straw hat. Her fingers shook. Rosalind—in jail.

Would the Howards condone that? Everything was going to hell or could ever be as degrading as seeing Rosalind appear before the sober-faced magistrate that morning.

She sat rigidly next to Gordon, seeming not to breathe and bit down on her lips until they hurt. Dreamily the rain beat against the windows.

Rosalind's green dress, fresh and new and lovely the night before, was crushed and wrinkled. Her dark curls were flat and dishevelled and her face was pale and shiny from the tears that had dried on it.

She looked much more than one day older as she stood beside Van, who did not look at her, and heard pieces and falling on her, she thought. Everything she had been certain of was tearing apart . . .

They left her mother crying. In his car, she said, "We've been such a lot of trouble to you and the Howards, Gordon."

"Not you, Constance. There is nothing I wouldn't do for you."

Later she thought that nothing the magistrate direct his talk chiefly to her and shame her for her temper and jealousy.

But she seemed scarcely to hear what he was saying . . . Van had not looked at her! And last night he had looked at her with loathing! And all night she had cried and prayed that he would forgive her . .

Gordon paid their fines and the four came out in the rain together.

When they came to the car, Constance said, "I'll sit in the back with Rosalind."

Looking first at Gordon and then at Constance, Van said, "I don't want any advice from either of you. I made up my mind last night. Rosalind is going back to Vine street. I'm through!"

Rosalind cried, "No, no, please Van . . ."

He looked at Constance. "A lot of good it did me to settle down and work hard! I stopped drinking and gambling and playing around and I was pretty pleased with myself. I did my best! Tell your mother that. My mother was good to Rosalind. She had an unlimited allowance. She had everything she wanted.

"But last night . . . a brawl in a road house, insulting a girl she didn't know, a riot, and spending the night in jail . . . I can't forget that. I've been in a lot of scrapes but I've never been in jail before. And my wife, my wife, put me in jail . . ."

Rosalind whimpered, "Please, please . . ."

"You're upset," Gordon said. "You don't know what you're saying."

"Sure I'm upset. Who wouldn't be? But that's all I've got to say. I'm through and it's final. And I don't want any advice or any pleading. Take her back to Vine Street. I'll get home some other way.

"I'll have a maid pack her things and send them to her." For the first time he looked at Rosalind. "And I loved you! I thought you were something special!"

MOTHER FORGIVES

Constance, sick with shame, held Rosalind all the way home.

Gordon said, "I'll have a talk with Nina and Van tonight and see what I can do. Rosalind is still his wife."

Rosalind, her head against her sister's shoulder, did not speak. There was no fight left in her. All she could think of was Van walking away . . .

Ruth was waiting on the porch. Seeing Rosalind without Van, she knew she had come home to stay. In the hall she kissed her and smiled a twisted smile and said, "It's all right, dear. You're home."

All day Rosalind stayed in the little bedroom that had once been hers. Downstairs Constance and her mother heard her walk back and forth. Before dinner the footsteps ceased and Constance went upstairs.

Wearing Constance's old blue satin negligee, Rosalind was sitting on the window ledge, staring out the window.

"Feeling better?"

The younger girl shook her head. "Will I ever feel better than this?" Her mouth tightened. "All over a new dress I wanted to wear last night. I met him at the Red Slipper and I lost him at the Red Slipper. I've made a fine mess of things and I thought I had the world in my hand. Oh, I'm a smart girl, all right. I threw away everything.

"My temper, Father's temper. I got it honestly from him."

Her lips trembled now. "I'm going to miss all the luxury, but I—I could do without it if—if I had Van. I went crazy thinking about him with another girl. I didn't know what I was doing! And I love him so much."

Downstairs a door opened and closed.

Father," Constance said.

IT'S TOO LATE

"Oh, send him up. Let me get it over. I don't care what he says to me." She looked up. "Constance, do you—do you think there's a chance that the Howards will forgive me?"

Her eyes implored Constance to tell her that they would. "I'm a fine one to ask anything of you the way I've treated you since Van and I were married. You were right. It went to my head.

"Why didn't you shake some sense in me and bring me down to earth? I'm down to earth now. Last night did that. If only I hadn't gone there . . ."

Constance said, "Gordon is going to talk to them tonight."

"It won't help. They're through with me. Van has a lot of ways of forgetting he was ever married to me. And a lot of girls will be glad he's free."

Hair Loss Traced To Many Causes

MILD disorders of the ductless glands, especially thyroid, are supposed to be responsible for thinning of the hair and baldness. Undernourishment will deplete the glorious crown; worry will have a bad effect upon it.

Hair has a sympathetic nature. If something is wrong elsewhere in the body, it goes into a state of depression. The best way to keep the hair in good condition is to shampoo it frequently, friction oil into the scalp, having regard for the rules of health.

Fashion Flash

FASHION experts unanimously agree—for once—that the flower mode has passed its peak, that ribbons will replace posies as number one trimming motif—look for loops and loops of velvet, satin or grosgrain, for "pinked" ribbon frills and myriads of bowknots to appear everywhere on Fall costumes . . .

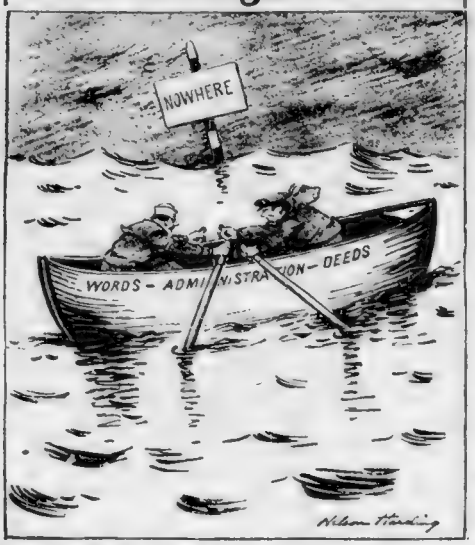
Pull Together!



The Editor Says: The Roosevelt Administration, in its newest appeal to the country, wants everybody to "pull together" and lift the nation out of depression into prosperity.

But, unfortunately and regrettably, the plea is not so convincing as it ought to be.

Too well known is the fact that the Administration itself has done much to cause discord and reluctance in every field of endeavor.

It has abetted division and dissension in organized labor, splitting groups that should push forward in harmony.

It has preached "class hatred" on so many occasions that nobody can remember half of them. The Ickes and Jackson speeches were notorious examples.

It has harassed industry with punitive taxes which curtailed employment while exhorting industry to provide more jobs and wages.

It has imposed confiscatory levies on factories at the very time it was removing levies from the goods of our foreign competitors who now flood our domestic markets with their peasant-made products.

We must co-operate. There should be no hesitancy. It is the ONLY WAY out of this "recession."

All we need is a start—a start that the Administration itself must make by permitting its DEEDS to "pull together" more effectively with its WORDS.

DON'T BE "SUPERIOR"! This is the good advice Mr. Louis E. Kirstein, vice-president of William Filene's Sons Company, gives in a Harvard Alumni Bulletin article. He writes:

"Some men are handicapped by a certain attitude of aloofness which they acquire and which they think is their natural prerogative because they are graduates of a university like Harvard."

Of course, he does not mean ALL the University's sons. "Most of them," he explains, "are a fine and democratic lot as one would want to know." His verbal spanking is for the small and puffed-up minority.

Mr. Kirstein is right; snobbishness and an indication that one considers himself better than the other fellow are a disgusting combination that guarantees defeat in any business or profession.

Rare is the child who can resist deflating a balloon. Even rarer is the man who can resist doing the same thing to human beings who imitate balloons.

"THEY'LL STAY IN!" That is the statement which comes to us from Major Ralph W. Robart, chairman of the State Parole Board, and he refers to habitual criminals.

"Not one of them," he says, "will be released until he has served his ENTIRE sentence. Regardless of what other parole boards are doing or have done in the past, this board will see that persistent offenders are not turned loose."

That is the sensible way to handle this important job. Also, it is the best way to earn and hold public confidence. Too long have our penal institutions resembled merry-go-rounds, on which professional criminals rode from one law violation to another.

Paroles should be reserved for men who have the moral strength "to go straight." To continue to hand them to the dregs of society would only hasten the day when there would be paroles for no prisoners, not even for first offenders.

The Political Parade

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON, April 30.

THERE is a very ancient adage to the effect that it makes considerable difference whose ox is gored.

It was never truer than in its application to New Deal politics.

The Administration is moving heaven and earth to head off what it calls propaganda against the new huge spending program, by checking public opinion at its source and making it appear in advance that it is prejudiced and organized.

But while every effort is being made to discredit public opinion that may be expressed against the political, spending spree, the publicity machines of the Administration are working overtime grinding out propaganda in favor of the pending raid on the taxpayers.

PWA—which knew plenty well in advance all about the new program—is furnishing every Democratic Congressman with exact information as to just how much money will be spent in his district, and the purpose for which it will be blown in.

The object is to build up public sentiment in every district IN FAVOR OF THE SPENDING DEBAUCH.

When the government does that it becomes a righteous, a holy thing.

But when a taxpayer protests against it who "that's wicked. It's propaganda."

• • •

THESE PWA appeals to local cupidity are being inserted by the dozen in the Congressional Record. This gives them a status for free printing and free franking through the mails.

They will be flooded over the country in one of the most stupendous publicity efforts in the whole brazen history of New Deal propaganda.

It should be interesting for the American people to ascertain where their tax money is going.

A typical allotment is that $5047-976. The fund is for the town of Scottsboro, in that State of a population of less than 3000 will get a city house and jail to cost $72,000. Mobile will get $2,487,000 for toll bridge and docks. Pennsylvania has listed projects ready for the go-sign totaling nearly $45,000,000, for the Democratic politicians to quarrel over.

For Illinois projects amounting to a grand total of $107,777,501 are listed. In Arizona projects have been approved amounting to $6,-574,530. And so it goes!

• • •

THE THEORY is that when the people find out WHAT THEY ARE GOING TO GET they will be so greedy for the spoils they will forget all about WHO IS GOING TO PAY.

To the politician it is sound psychology. It has worked before. So give it another whirl!

• • •

WHILE CONGRESS is cutting Edgar Hoover's G-men to the bone it is permitting Secretary Ickes to set up a secret service of his own in the Interior Department.

An appropriation of a half million for this service was included in the original bill but went out in the House on a point of order there being no authority in law for it. The Senate restored the item and the House swallowed it by a vote of 86 to 17 virtually unnoticed. Thus in a few minutes was established a new espionage system.

Isn't It So?

If you wish another to keep your secret, first keep it yourself.

Don't spread your wings beyond your nest.

You are either a plus or a minus man.

There are often times when ignorance is bliss and covers many verbal loopholes.

Dyspepsia is the remorse of a guilty stomach.

An honest man welcomes criticism and correction; a too ambitious man feeds on fawning and flattery.

What of Today, Tomorrow?

Let's Tax Idleness, Henry Ford Urges

The Boston Evening American today presents the seventh in a series of exclusive articles disclosing Henry Ford's message to the people of America.

In his sixth article, published in Friday's Boston Evening American, the motor magnate predicted the end of war and the coming of an age of lasting peace.

"Tax idleness, not industry!"

That is Henry Ford's tax program.

"Land, especially, that is idle," Mr. Ford told this reporter, "ought to be taxed more heavily than land that is in use.

"There should be a tax on idleness, not a tax on industriousness and production."

Mr. Ford, in his long, five-hour conversation with this reporter last week in historic old Wayside Inn at Sudbury, emphasized a sincere belief that this country will work its way out of the depression.

All of the emphasis, however, in that statement must be placed on the word WORK.

Henry Ford

"There seems to be two kinds of people these days," Mr. Ford said, smiling a trifle thinly.

"There's one kind that want things done for them — almost everything done for them. They are waiting for a miracle, and meanwhile they are crying their eyes out.

"Then there's the other kind—and they're a desperate lot! Yes sir! they're fighting tooth and nail with their backs to the wall, in sheer desperation!

"Well, now, you can wait around and see, if you want to, but I don't think any miracles are going to happen.

"And I don't think things are so all-fired desperate, either.

"What we need is a little less pessimism, a little less of such a 'desperate' outlook—and a little less WAITING for something to happen—a little less waiting for someone else to do things for us.

NATION NEEDS WORK

"What we need to do is roll up our sleeves and go back to WORK!

"Oh, it'll come! It'll come! My only point is, we're wasting a lot of time. Sooner or later, enough people are going to begin to see that the only way out is through WORK—HARD WORK!—and when that time comes the tide will turn."

Mr. Ford paused, and suddenly grinned.

"Do you know what prayer is?" he asked.

"Why—why, I suppose so," said this reporter. "It's—well—"

"Well, I'll tell you what I think prayer is," said Mr. Ford. "For it to be any good, YOU'VE GOT TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT."

"Sort of 'God helps them who help themselves,'" murmured this reporter.

Mr. Ford nodded.

"You've got to take some action YOURSELF," he insisted.

"It's like a couple of the boys out at one of my schools. They're fine boys! And we were having an affair, and they wanted to come.

"So they asked their teacher, and he said yes, it would be all right with him if it was all right with me. So they asked me. They said:

"'Can we come to the party this afternoon, Mr. Ford?'

"And I said, 'Why, yes, I guess you can.'

"And they said:

"'Can we come tonight, too?'

"I told them yes.

"Then they started to thank me, but I stopped them. I told them:

"'Don't thank me.' All you did is what Christ told you to do. PRAYER IS NOTHING MORE THAN ASKING. But you see, you had to do something more than merely ask—merely sit and wish you could come to the party. You had to DO SOMETHING YOURSELVES."

ACTION NECESSARY

Mr. Ford shook his head soberly.

"I wish people could see that," he said. "I wish they could see that they have to do more than just sit around and ask.

"Oh, I know! I know! Tell 'em to go to work—GO TO WORK!—and they stand and look at you.

"'Where IS there work?' they say. 'Or they've still got the cart before the horse, some of them—they're not thinking of WORK, they're thinking of MONEY. Money's very necessary, of course, but they don't see—yet—that it's money that comes out of work, not work out of money.

"They say, 'Where IS there work?' They say, 'There isn't any work for us in industry.' I know! I know! That's just why I say a 'back-to-the-farm' movement is so essential. It's inevitable!

"I don't mean that everyone should have a farm—although a farm wouldn't hurt anyone—everyone should have a farm and profit by the experience.

REMOVE FEAR!

"There's always been a farm in MY family, and there always will be, as long as I have anything to say about it.

"But what I mean is, a 'back-to-the-farm' movement wouldn't necessarily take in everybody. What it would be for would be TO TAKE UP THE SLACK IN INDUSTRY.

"We've taken too many farm workers off the farm and made industrial workers of them. And they have nothing to fall back on. Industry needs these workers and will hire them, but they shouldn't put all their eggs in one basket that way.

"Nine-tenths of our troubles come because men fear the loss of their jobs—fear being laid off. Yet that, sometimes, is unavoidable. I want to see the workers of this country self-dependent and independent—not dependent on me or any other employer."

"I'm afraid people aren't going to understand you, Mr. Ford," The Boston American-Sunday Advertiser told the motor magnate. Read what Mr. Ford replied to that in the concluding article of this series—in TOMORROW'S SUNDAY ADVERTISER.

Girl About Town -:- by Betty Di Pesa

HOW would you like to dress exactly like your favorite debutante? With nary a fairy-godmother to help, or even an Aladdin's lamp in the offing, it can be done

It seems that for pin money purposes the debbies, as well as society matrons, sell their cast-offs. And you can wear the self-same clothes that stare at you out of the society page

Betty Di Pesa

Mary Kezar of Huntington avenue has been in the business for 20 years. Her clients read like a blue book. When a deb's allowance is short, or perchance a society matron has a pressing bridge debt, she just raids her closets and finds Mary Kezar an eager market for the loot

Mrs. Kezar's customers, on the selling end, include mostly stock company actresses and night club entertainers who must change gowns weekly. However, secretaries and stenographers, appreciative of foreign labels and exclusive models, are not without representation.

Each deb and matron develops a following among Mrs. Kezar's customers. And, in many cases, a customer has worn a particular belle's clothes, year in and year out. Often she follows her from her sub-deb days, through her debut, to her matron years.

HAVE we been "slumming" in vain? Something has been happening at Billy Rose's Casa Manana in New York that has given the streamlined ladies in the chorus—and in the audience—a horrid little suspicion that maybe all this starving does not pay.

That something is impressive, in size as in fact. It is an act called "The Rosebuds"—six happy and hearty buds whose collective weight totals 1500 pounds.

Dressed in bloomer costumes of voluminous cut, the better to enhance their ample proportions, the six cavort around the stage, dance with remarkable grace, kick their plump legs in unison, and have a grand time doing it

Of course, the audience howls. The men love it. But you suddenly realize that they are not laughing AT the Rosebuds, but WITH them. The genuine happiness of these girls is a relief after the phoney smirks of half-starved chorines. They are fat and funny.

But here is the REAL surprise. When the show is over and boy-friends call for the show girls, there are few limousines. Most of the pretty dancers greet young men with just enough cash for hamburger and coffee in a cafeteria, and that's often Dutch treat. But the Rosebuds rate beaux. They are mostly successful business and professional men who are proud of the good-humored gals.

Big business and its representatives has its surprising personal whimsies. For example, Edna Blake Hald, former president of the Massachusetts Astrological Association and regional representative of the National Astrological Association, tells me she has among her clients brokers who won't make a move in the market without consulting her. In fact, she says the majority of her appointments are with business men.

She even conducts a telephone service for her long distance customers. They pay a monthly bill.

One firm in South Boston will not hire employes without having their astrological chart's read. And Mrs. Hald often makes out charts for the business firms themselves, with date of inception, planets they were born under, and subsequent happenings.

Mrs. Hald does not consider herself a fortune-teller, or the like, but a cold scientist. And, when president of Massachusetts Astrological Association, she procured a state charter for the organization.

The Only Way -:- by Hugh S. Johnson

WASHINGTON—There is nothing complex or difficult about government and business cooperating to end this depression. There is little that business can do. All that is necessary is for government to make it perfectly clear that people by investing their effort and their money are going to be permitted to make a reasonable amount of money and to keep a reasonable part of it.

General Johnson

That is the only formula and it desn't need any 16 captains of industry plus Henry Ford or any round-robins about cooperation, to make it plain. It is far from clear today. Nobody knows what future Administration policy on this great question is going to be and until that is known, timid money and enterprise will continue to hide in holes.

There is a way to convince yourself of this without much argument. Just ask yourself: "If I were a trustee for a widow's life insurance payment and required to invest it in a safe venture, which would pay her a premium and preserve her security, where would I put it?" I don't know anybody who has that answer.

IT ISN'T a question of taxation alone, or trust-busting alone, or labor, agricultural or industrial policy alone. It is the combination of all and especially it is an element of similarity in all. That common thread is hostility to business and disapproval of, or at least indifference to, profits.

It would be silly to say that the Administration wants to see bad business. Its own political life depends on good business. But its essential attitude is the effective cause of bad business. It seems to divide the community into two personalities—two dogs, let's say. The under-dog is the ill-fed third. The upper-dog is the upper two-thirds. Both are sick pups just now.

The under-dog is, of course, the sicker. Doubtless the Administration wants to help both dogs but it seems to feel that the way to help the under-dog is to whale the daylights out of the upper one.

Of course, that is an utterly wrong idea about the whole situation. The more prosperous two-thirds of this country does not live on the less fortunate one-third. The truth is just the other way around. The lower one-third lives on the upper two-thirds. The way to help the under-priviledged isn't to strangle their milch cow. The secret to prosperity is to try to help both the upper and nether segments of the country.

Surely we should help most the one that needs help most. But help them both and pretty soon we won't have to help either.

IN A CLOSE-KNIT interdependent country like this you can't hurt any great segment without hurting all segments. Each is a market for all the rest and the way to markets for all is to activate as many great segments as you can.

The larger the groups which we can get under way, the quicker the recovery can be. There are at least three great pools of possible employment which are now stagnant directly due to something the Government either is or is not doing.

1. The whole railroad web—because of Federal failure to act.

2. The whole utilities system—because of too much action.

3. The housing situation—because of insufficient action.

Never was it more plainly true that for what is happening—or unfortunately not happening—responsibility is directly traceable to the attitude and the policy of the Federal Government.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—For several days prior to the meeting between Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain, now taking place in London, the French were privately trying to get some public indication that the pro-Chamberlain clique in the U. S. State Department was not really representative of the American public.

Reason for French concern is that Roosevelt's public statement blessing the Mussolini-Chamberlain grab-deal in the Mediterranean has been circulated all over Europe as proof that the United States is 100 per cent behind the British prime minister.

This put the French with their backs to the wall. Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet knew that when they got to London they would be faced with some tough talk from Chamberlain, demanding that France junk Czechoslovakia, cut her ties with Russia, join a four-power pact with Germany, do nothing to disturb the Mussolini-Chamberlain decision that Franco wins in Spain.

The Frenchmen knew also that the Roosevelt "I bless thee, noble Chamberlain" statement would be shoved under their noses by the British as proof that the United States was with them on all these points.

That was why the French have been hoping that some leader in the House or Senate would sound off and give them support in their contention that the pro-Fascist career clique in the State Department does not really represent U. S. public opinion.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IT WAS boy's birthday. Almost twelve years since he went.

Once I thought I could never bear to face this day again . . . remembering that first small wavering wail . . . that last long look.

Strange, how we feel about the birthdays of those who've gone—making them a time of horror and despair, instead of rejoicing.

His first birth-day—how incredibly lovely it was, in spite of the storm battering against the window, the misery turning in my heart.

Elsie Robinson

An inexperienced, unloved girl, 3000 miles from home or anyone who cared. Yet, with the first curling clutch of his tiny hands the storm ceased to exist, the misery was forgotten. And with him there was born a new, a radiant and a tender world.

SUCH A JOYOUS WORLD FOR THOSE 21 YEARS, IN SPITE OF POVERTY AND PAIN. THEN—IT ALL STOPPED. WOULD NEVER GO AGAIN. OR SO I THOUGHT. BUT NOW, TODAY—

As I write, laughter tumbles across the field into the door. The youngsters are playing football . . . scrambling, sprawling, racing through a tangle of golden grass and leaves . . . shouting with excitement.

Presently they'll come straggling in through the twilight, hungry as wolves, crowding the cabins with their laughing tussle and bursting health.

Dear, dark-haired little Jack, with the eager mind . . plodding, husky, round-eyed Louis . . . tall, shy, gentle Don . . . frail little Paul and baby Ray.

They're here today because of my son. Here because, by his lovely life, his gallant death, George made me understand their need, made me long to help their struggle. They are—HIS LIVING MEMORIAL.

WHAT would I have known of joy without his life . . . or of pain without his death? The day he came and the day he went were both BIRTHDAYS to me . . . birth of new tenderness and tolerance and comprehension

I was so stupid until he came . . . so selfish and shut in by my own prejudice and conceit. His coming and his going were both keys—TO OPEN LIFE.

AND YET THEY SAY HE'S DEAD!

And some think I should spend all my hours in tears upon this DAY!

Not tears! Thanksgiving instead! Thanksgiving because I received new birth when he was born . . . because I received new life when he passed on

DON'T CRY WHEN BIRTHDAYS COME. BE GLAD! DON'T GO APART . . . AND SHUT THE DOOR . . . AND SAY "THEY'RE DEAD!" INSTEAD, SAY—

"HERE'S ANOTHER CHANCE TO GIVE THEM LIFE! ANOTHER CHANCE TO PASS THEIR SHINING POWER AND MEANING ON! ANOTHER CHANCE TO DO FOR THEM THE THINGS THEY LONGED TO DO . . . TO MAKE LIFE GLADDER FOR THE SAD . . . AND STRONGER FOR THE WEAK . . . AND SAFER FOR THE SICK AND FRIGHTENED!"

My dear lad's birthday. Your precious little girl's . . . the gentle mother's . . . or the kindly, understanding Dad's . . . don't let them be DEATH-DAYS . . let them be true and joyous BIRTH-DAYS.

Greet those days as a young mother greets her baby's birth. Pride in her eyes, despite the pain . . . joy in her heart, despite the price she must pay.

Somewhere our darlings are born again, into a new and nobler venture.

And here, we who so loved them are reborn to wider understanding, and a finer service.

BE GLAD FOR BIRTHDAYS! DARE TO PAY THEIR PRICE!

March of Events

By BENJAMIN DeCASSERES

NOWADAYS there are two kinds of singers, writers, painters and poets—proletarian and artists.

Feodor Challapin, the great Russian basso who recently passed away in Paris, belonged to the breed of great artists.

He and Maxim Gorky used to play marbles together, but they stopped playing when the Lenin-Trotsky gang descended on Russia in the dead of night, in 1918.

Gorky was satisfied to remain a citizen of the greatest slave-state in history. But Challapin went forth into the free world and penned this declaration of independence of an artist in his autobiography:

"I PERSIST IN THINKING AND FEELING THAT MAN'S LIBERTY IN HIS LIFE AND WORK IS THE HIGHEST GOOD. HAPPINESS MUST NOT BE IMPOSED BY FORCE. NO ONE KNOWS WHAT CONSTITUTES ANOTHER'S HAPPINESS. I STILL LOVE THAT LIBERTY WHICH GORKY AND I ONCE SO ARDENTLY WORSHIPPED."

That's the difference between a man who holds his natural gifts paramount and a man (Gorky) who allows the state to prostitute it to its will.

I have often wondered, at my many attendances at the opera, just what the singers were saying in their various tongues. Even when they sang in English I only caught every fifth word.

The singers know that audiences do not know what it is all about, as is proved by the story that Beniamino Gigli tells about Challapin.

Once, singing the role of Boris Godunov, Challapin sang, in Russian, to his man-servant, in the wings:

"Go to the hotel immediately, get the two bottles of good wine I forgot in my room and bring them here, as we leave immediately after this damned opera is over."

The applause was deafening when Challapin concluded his aria. Maybe I was in that audience and howled Bravo!

Well, after all, it was the voice of that great actor-singer that we were all crazy about, not the words.

The world still dabbles with the idea of "sin."

Evil exists. All pain, all cruelty is evil. But "sin" is relative and purely a matter of geography and theological definition.

The Rev. Harold S. Rambo, pastor of the Adams Memorial Presbyterian Church, in New York City, asked H. L. Mencken, John Erskine and myself which were the "seven deadly sins."

Mr. Mencken found envy the chief sin. Mr. Erskine's list included pride, covetousness, envy and sloth.

My list was cruelty, jazz, stupidity, Communism, Nazism, Fascism and mental laziness.

I want to add a current eighth deadly sin—and that is swallowing all the moon-cake that the Administration's political cooks hand out to the people.

Robin's ma was "Capeway Katrina" and his dad "Kresshingham's Taffy." His grandfather was the famous champion, "Idahurst Roderic," winner of many medals as one of the best cocker spaniels in the country, and "Flush" of the movies was his grand-uncle.

The puppy weights nine pounds, is smart, full of life, likes to play, will love the water in common with his breed, and can easily be trained as a field dog.

So sit down, and compose that letter right away. You may win "Kresshingham's Robinhood" for your own.

Koussevitzky Given Ovation At Symphony

By RUTH MASTERS

When Dr. Serge Koussevitzky appeared before the last Friday afternoon audience of the Boston Symphony season, everybody stood up to clap.

The same gesture accompanied the applause at the close of the concert. A customary procedure to be sure, established by an audience notable for its politeness towards a conductor to whom it owes much. But sometimes, as on this occasion we felt that there was more to it than that. Sentiment on the part of some—perhaps a very real appreciation on the part of others.

During his 14 years with the orchestra, Koussevitzky has grown with the instrument of his making. It must not be forgotten that it was he who pulled it out of the hazardous state of its existence after the war, he who restored it as an instrument capable of fine music making, who went further and made the Boston Symphony Orchestra at once popular at home and famous abroad.

His perception as an artist, his judgment and ingeniousness as a program builder, these qualities are generally acknowledged too often taken for granted.

The program of the last pair of concerts of the season included Haydn's Symphony in G major, No. 88; Debussy's "La Mer," and Brahms' First Symphony.

This evening's performance in Symphony Hall will bring to a close the 57th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Davis-Warner Feud Ends; Bette on Job

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service
(Copyright 1938)

HOLLYWOOD, April 30—No childhood classic I ever read to my own young hopeful (beg pardon, Miss Harriet Parsons) ever seemed half as charming to me as Mary Mapes Dodge's "Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates." Now, we are told that Sol Lesser is preparing this for Bobby Breen and little Irene Dare, his five-year-old Sonja Henie. You may remember there was talk for a while that Sonja herself might do it.

Louella O. Parsons

But this is really a children's story about children, and I am glad it is to be played by youngsters. Another interesting point is that "Hans Brinker" will incorporate another famous story of Holland, the legend of the boy hero who held his finger in the dyke to stem the flood, and, of course, there will be the famous race for the silver skates on the Zuyder Zee. Production will follow "The Vagabond Kid," Irene and Bobby's current picture.

The Bette Davis-Warner Brothers feud is ended, and Bette returns to work Tuesday. She will play the lead in "The Sisters," based on Myron Brimg's novel, scheduled as one of the most important Warner pictures for 1938. Her role is that of Louise, eldest of three daughters, whose lives are pictured from early girlhood through middle age. Anatole Litvak is director, and David Lewis produces.

Now that Bette is back, it seems likely that the "Wuthering Heights" deal will be concluded. Bette's return eliminates the Irene Dunne possibility and Irene will undoubtedly do "Memory of Love" for RKO.

• • •

"Assigned to Adventure," the fascinating book based on the happenings in the life of Irene Kuhn, New York newspaper woman, is now being read in Hollywood by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is especially interested in buying it for Myrna Loy, who is now reading it.

• • •

The preview audience in Pomona settled the ending of "Holiday" for Columbia. At the end of the picture the audience was asked whether they liked the new ending, where Lizzie and Johnnie met on the boat, or whether they preferred the old ending with the inference that she was joining him. Almost to a man the audience rose and shouted, "Let the ending stay as it is!"

Katharine Hepburn and George Cukor have always been an unbeatable combination but "Holiday" is going to do new things for Hepburn and add new laurels to Cukor as a director. It is really a picture.

First the G-men had their innings on the screen, and now the United States Secret Service is the next to be elected for glorification. Just heard that W. H. Moran, former chief of our Secret Service, is coming here at the invitation of Warners to act as technical adviser and also to work on scripts of their Secret Service series featuring Ronald Reagan. Mr. Moran will draw on his personal experiences in the service with names, places and personalities disguised, of course.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Nelson Eddy finishes his concert tour at Wichita tonight and returns to co-star with Jeanette MacDonald; Natalie Draper, Tom Brown's pretty bride, testing for a role in "Senior Prom" at Columbia. Betty Jaynes has bought her first car. Humphrey Bogart getting his exercise by building a fence around his property. That's all for today. See you Monday!

Labor Stage Hit Coming

The Labor Stage musical revue which spoofs boss and worker alike, "Pins and Needles," comes to the Shubert on May 9.

One of the outstanding successes of the past New York season, "Pins and Needles" should be of unusual interest to local theater-goers because, in addition to providing unusual entertainment, it is a stage offering that is founded on an idea and not a tradition.

Produced at the Labor Stage, New York's Princess Theater, last November and acted by members of the I. L. G. W. U., "Pins and Needles" had been in preparation for over a year and, contrary to expectations, was an instant success.

Directed by Robert M. Gordon, the skits, songs and dances are deftly woven into a continuity in the manner of the best revues it has been reported.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

MR. Irving Caesar, the song writer, induced us to attend a pocket billiards contest the other night.

Mr. Caesar, at the age of forty-odd, has just discovered pocket billiards, which our customers know as pool. We rejected Mr. Caesar's invitation at first offering, explaining to him that weh ad wasted at least half our life hanging around pool rooms.

"But this is a championship match," said Mr. Caesar.

We said we had seen Alfredo De Oro, the Cuban cue magician, play championship matches when he was good. When we saw that Mr. Caesar was unimpressed, we felt as discouraged as if we had told a racing nut we had seen Man o' War, and gotten no reaction from the nut.

"You don't see a lot of people there that you don't want to see," urged Mr. Caesar, and that sold us.

We followed him along Broadway until at 48th street he suddenly dived down a flight of steps to the Strand Billiard Academy.

• • •

The contest was between Mr Andy Ponzi, a short, chunky, smiling chap with curly hair, and Mr. Jimmy Caris of Wilmington, Del Mr. Ponzi is an American Italian and Mr. Caras is an American Greek.

It seems Caras was defending his title of American pocket billiards champion against Mr. Ponzi, from whom he won said title a month or so ago. It seems a losing champ has the option of challenging for the title again within thirty days. They both wore dinner clothes, but Mr. Caras had discarded his coat in favor of a sweater vest with sleeves. Mr. Ponzi once got so concerned about a shot that he shed his coat, too, that his muscles might have freer play. He missed the shot.

Mr Ponzi was the first big-time player we ever witnessed who rooted for himself, so to speak. When a ball was acting reluctant about entering a pocket Mr Ponzi would give it encouraging grunts, and a little of that old "Body English." We liked that in Mr. Ponzi. It showed interest and enthusiasm. Mr. Caras played more impassively.

• • •

There were not many spectators present, and they were very quiet A couple of ladies were in the front row. The most noise was made by Mr. Caesar's heavy breathing. He was greatly excited and puffed furiously at a big cigar.

Nearly everybody present smoked, though we did not notice either of the contestants indulging. The fellow who was not shooting would sit quietly back in the gloom beyond the glare of the lights over the table, and watch his opponent without expression, occasionally a spiatter of Chandelapping came from the spectators.

• • •

Mr. Caesar said he enjoyed these masters of the cue the same as he would a great violinist. We said we wished he could have seen Alfredo De Oro when he was at his best.

"Ponzi can't play unless he has rhythm," said Mr. Caesar.

We did not quite get that one, and Mr. Caesar explained that he meant Mr. Ponzi had to be in good stroke and spirits to put forward his best cuing. We talked with the contestants after the evening's match and found them both deeply interested in their game, with Mr. Ponzi the more expressive. He really loves to play pocket billiards.

We learned one interesting thing. The manufacturers of billiards academy equipment used to finance tournaments to maintain interest in pocket billiards and put the champions on their pay rolls. This practice has been discontinued, and now some individual enthusiast has to come forward and do the financing. We gathered that there is not the money for the champions that there used to be.

Open Season for Racing "Touts" | Dizzy Dean's Injured Arm

By JACK CONWAY

THIS IS the open season for "touts" as well as for trout.

Now that the Massachusetts horse racing season is officially on its way, the ancient and honorable order of "touts" have dusted off their loudest looking suits, put on 1000-mile shirts, bought themselves a few racing sheets and entrenched themselves in spots where race goers gather.

Mr. Boston

The local "touts" believe there should be a law against Florida, Maryland and other Southern "touts" operating at Suffolk Downs and at other Massachusetts tracks. They contend a local boy is entitled to a break in the matter of clipping a "sucker."

There are various classes of "touts." The common variety of paddock tout tries to get eight to ten customers who will invest $2 for him. In this way he is sure to come up with a winner as he takes the precaution of giving each client a different horse. This low-brow "tout" is happy if he is able to chisel a meagre living out of life.

Then there is the big operator who frequents the bar in the clubhouse, and who often poses as an owner or trainer of horses. He is shooting for big game, and tries to promote wealthy bettors who will give him a commission on winning tickets.

There was the case at a local track a few years ago where a wealthy business man lost $15,000 on information furnished by the high pressure "tout." In justice to this class of "touts" they furnish their followers with the best information they have as their own financial success depends upon the horses they name coming down in front.

This group of "touts," however, can profit if they are able to get an occasional winner even though their client eventually ends up talking to himself.

There are few squawks from the rich men who are trimmed by "touts." Their pride would not permit them to admit to their friends that they were the victims of sure thing men.

Women Easy Victims of "Touts"

THE LADIES, and may God bless them, are easy victims for the $2 "touts." The average lady who goes to a horse track knows very little about horses, and after her various systems have failed she is susceptible to the advice of a "tout."

State inspectors have been used in the past to keep Massachusetts tracks clear of "touts," but the Racing Commission cannot take this precaution at the start of the Suffolk Downs meeting due to the fact its budget was slashed $44,000 by the Legislature. The private detectives on duty on the track will have to be more active than ever to protect the public from "touts."

• • •

$2 Payoff Prices to Remain

MASSACHUSETTS race tracks will continue to post the payoff price as a basis of $2 tickets. Suffolk Downs for a time planned to have the payoff posted on a $1 basis, but was ordered not to do so by the Racing Commission.

The Racing Commission suggested that if Suffolk Downs wished it could post a line below the prices stating the payoff was computed on the basis of each $1 wagered. The track agreed to do this and avoided an unnecessary racing dispute.

Race goers are educated to the $2 payoff, and there would have been a great deal of confusion, if the prices on the board were on a $1 basis. There would also have been considerable confusion at the payoff windows.

Dizzy Dean's Injured Arm

NOW THAT Branch Rickey of the Cardinals has cashed the $185,000 check the Cubs gave along with three second-class players for Dizzy Dean he isn't worrying about the fact the "Great One" is out of the game with a muscle injury in his salary arm. It was necessary for Dean to leave the game in the fourth inning of a clash with the Cincinnati Reds.

Nobody censored Rickey for accepting $185,000 for Dean. It is a question whether even Joe DiMaggio, who plays regularly is worth that much money.

Of course if Dizzy has one of his good years and wins the pennant and world's championship for the Cubs, the $185,000 investment will look like ordinary money.

Tom Yawkey paid $125,000 for "Lefty" Grove to find he had a pitcher with a lame arm. It was the first time "Lefty" ever had a lame arm and the condition became a mental as well as a physical condition. It was a year before Grove was himself again. Then on account of his advanced years "Lefty" was obliged to coast along at certain stages of the flag race.

As Grove has been one of Joe Cronin's most reliable pitchers for several years, Yawkey probably feels he has got his $125,000 back.

There is always the element of a gamble in the purchase of any ball player at a fabulous figure. A single injury can wreck the future of a super-star.

Kennedy Horses Win 11 Ribbons

5 Star Final Potential Champion

NEWARK, N. J., April 30 (AP) - Three stables are fighting for the unofficial honor of collecting the most ribbons in the 18th annual Newark horse show at the Essex Troop Armory.

As the show goes into its final day, Mr. and Mrs. Wettach's Trillora Farm at Shrewsbury is leading with an even dozen, three blues, two reds, four yellows and three whites.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kennedy's Audwill Stables at Southboro, Mass., have eleven, including four blues, three reds, three yellows and one white, and the May Top Stables of Mrs. Edgar Mayer at Port Chester, N. ., has ten, including two bluess, four reds, and four yellows.

Another New Jersey outfit, the Fair City Stables of Mr. and Mrs L. Victor Weil of Elberon, remains in the running for most first places, its fine saddle horses taking three during last night's action.

With Janet Sue, winner of the five-gaited class for mares, in the ring, it has a worthy opponent for Trillora's Five Star Final in the $250 five-gaited stake and championship tonight.

Five Star Final won a blue Thursday and has been picked by the experts as the potential champion only of this show but of the country this year.

The first big stake, the $250 class for hunters, last night went to Audwill's Vital Spot, a seven-year-old brown gelding, in what was a major upset in the horse show world. Clifton's Beau, many-time winner from the Warrenville Stable of Mrs. Harry Frank, Jr., was the odds-on favorite but the judges, after long deliberation, picked the Massachusetts horse for the blue and gave Beau second.

'It's Nuthin,' Says Dean

CHICAGO, April 30 (INS)—Charlie Grimm's Cubs hung up a victory over their No 1 bogeyman Paul Derringer of the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 4, but in the process they suffered a loss that may far outweigh that one triumph.

Dizzy Dean, the colorful hurler who was obtained from the Cardinals two weeks ago at a heavy cash outlay, pulled a muscle in his pitching arm and had to retire with two out in the fourth inning.

Diz said he hurt his arm pitching to Lew Riggs, first man up in the fourth, whom he walked.

"It was on the first pitch to Riggs, a fast ball. I didn't feel right on it. I guess my foot slipped off the rubber.

"Naw, it ain't nuthin.' I'll be ready to take my next turn."

Dr. John F. Davis, club physician who examined Dizzy, also confidently stated Dean would be ready to take his turn on the mound in four days.

Many of Dizzy's mates, however, weren't so hopeful about it, remembering his arm ailment that kept him sidelined for most of the last two months in 1937.

Bill Strickland Sold to Dallas

ST. LOUIS, April 30 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns announced today the sale of pitcher Bill Strickland to Dallas of the Texas League and the release on option of Harry (Slim) Kimberlin, also a pitcher, to the San Antonio Missions, a Browns farm

Safe at Second Base

Brinkerhoff Farmed Out; B's in Philly

By BILL GRIMES

PHILADELPHIA, April 30—Manager Casey Stengel and his Bees arrived here this morning for a two game series,starting this afternoon, with the Phillies at Baker Bowl.

Ray Brinkerhoff

Danny MacFayden, who was to have pitched against the Giants in Boston, gets another shot at the Phillies this afternoon.

The "Deacon" was in rare form, last Sunday, when he held Jimmy Wilson's boys to three hits and didn't allow a man to reach second base.

Since he exhibited his charges in Boston, Wilson has shaken up his lineup. He has benched Earle Browne and George Scharein and is now using Gene Corbett at first base and Del Young at short.

Corbett was with the Phillies a year ago at the start of the season but he was farmed out to Buffalo where he hit for .234, while Young played in 109 games for Wilson a year ago, hitting for only .194.

Stengel will again try Max West in left field and Elbie Fletcher at first.

In the event the Bees fail to click with their present combination, "Old Case" will not hesitate to make further changes.

Ray Brinkerhoff, the lanky southpaw from Greenwich Village, who was picked up in New York, is with the Bees. He was taken along to pitch in batting practice but will return to New York tomorrow night for a short visit.

Brinkerhoff will report Tuesday to the Erie club, Akron, O., which is a Bees' farm in the Mid-Atlantic League.

Yankees Need Joe DiMaggio Spark

Gehrig Must Snap Out of .132 Pace

By DAVIS J. WALSH

International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, April 30 (INS)—Joe DiMaggio, who was so obdurate about not taking the Yankees' offer of $25,000 that he finally wound up taking $23,215.60, will appear in the line up for the first time this season down in Washington today and will set about seeing what can be done about maybe getting a world's championship outfit above fourth place.

Joseph is strictly a spoo-man on this one. He'll be expected to start something right away—and only an elevator man can do that.

JOE DiMAGGIO

What the Yanks really need is for somebody to stop Gehrig hitting .132. They are paying him $39,000 for that. I don't know what they're paying Crosetti and Gordon, but somebody ought to stop them hitting .179. Perhaps I should just say that somebody ought to stop them and let it go at that. Anyhow, Atlas couldn't carry that kind. Gomez isn't doing much pitching for his $20,000, either, but I suppose it'll all be forgotten in a few weeks when consummate skill begins to assert itself and the sap clubs of the league begin blowing doubleheaders by tense, dramatic scores of 14 to 5 and 11 to 2. Not in years, though, have the Yanks looked so awful as they have at the start of a season in which they were supposed to walk in.

The answer, of course, is DiMaggio and Gehrig, one out of the game and the other might as well be.

They, with Dickey, drive in the runs. When they don't, there aren't any. More than that, DiMaggio brings something to the ball field not always given to others, an intangible flair that seems to fire the club. There's something inspirational about the fellow and it may be that he'll be immediately effectual this time. For not yet has he started a season for the Yankees and always he has picked up the pace with timing and vision unimpaired.

Nonetheless, he's on the spot in more ways than several today and for some days to come. There has been a hint, for instance, of covert resentment on the team against his prolonged holdout. Meantime, there is overt evidence of animosity in the New York press, which has been known to become incensed for various reasons, or none, at the drop of the fedora.

They invariably expect you to remain cheerful under abuse and, when you don't, you're an unmitigated cad. The only way to get around that is to be an unmitigated cad who hits .390.

I, therefore, hope Joseph does.

Largest Stable

Denemarks Ship 35 Horses Here

By DAVE WILSON

Largest stable to arrive at Suffolk Downs to date was that of Mrs. Emil Denemark. In the group which arrived from Havre de Grace were 35 horses, including Finance, War Minstrel, Orientalist and other stakes champaigners.

Mrs. E. Denemark

With the stable was Mr. Denemark, the Illinois distributor for General Motors, who is making his first Boston trip. He announced that Mrs. Denemark would arrive the first of next week.

Training the stable is an old New England favorite, Willis Booth.

While with John R. Macomber, Booth saddled Petee Wrack when that horse won the historic Travers Stake in 1928, finishing in front of such capable horses as Victorian and Reigh Count.

Booth did well with the Denemark campaigners in Maryland and Florida.

Although they didn't time him, clockers are claiming a new footrace record for Mortimer M. Mahony, popular mutuels chief.

Besieged in his office atop the administration building by more than 500 applicants for jobs, the popular mutuels chief cracked all existing marks in a run-for-life dash to a waiting auto. When last seen he was driving like a madman in the general direction of Boston pursued on foot and by bicycle.

Those famed old lines "In the spring a young man's fancy" and so on ran true to form with Dave Egan, purveyor of press information at Rockingham, who deserted single standard a few days ago for double teaming . . . love may be grand but that call of "they're off" is just as strong . . . the honeymoon will be cut short as Mr. and Mrs. Egan are checking time tables up in Montreal in order to get back here for those bangtails.

Gruen Watch

For Leading Downs Jockey

The Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser will present the leading jockey and the leading trainer of the 37-day Suffolk Downs horse race meeting which starts today with handsome Gruen Precision Curvex wrist watches.

These costly Gruen timepieces, as modern as they are accurate, will be officially presented to the boy who rides the most Suffolk winners and to the trainer who saddles the most thoroughbreds to hit the winner's circle.

Come on in; the Water's Fine

The 3000-meter steeplechase run is no place for rheumatics for the going is sometimes quite wet. Here a group of collegiate hardies are hitting the water hole at the same time, and there's plenty of water in their eyes. Thomas M. Deckard of Indiana took the honors at the end.

N. E. Turf Chieftains At Sports Final Fete

Adams, Smith, Dooley, Aides To Attend

Turf leaders in New England's major tracks will be listed with the sport celebrities at the Boston Evening American Night Sports Final party at the Club Mayfair on May 8.

Lou Smith

Suffolk Downs, which is very much in the spotlight today, will have several of its leaders at the Mayfair for the big party.

Charles F. Adams, president of the board of directors of the Eastern Racing Association; Charles F. Connors, president of Suffolk Downs; James Linnehan, general manager of Suffolk Downs, and Tom Thorp, presiding steward, will all drop in for the festivities.

Lou Smith, who is in Boston planning for his Rockingham meeting, where he inaugurated turf racing into New England in 1933 will be on hand for the third successive year.

Judge Dooley, new chief at Narragansett, and his first aide, Billy Ames, will come up from Providence for the big affair.

These leaders in the "Sport of Kings" will make up just one group of sport leaders, for outstanding figures in baseball, boxing, greyhound racing, football, hockey, track and other sports will also be present.

Sports, though, is only one great feature in the Boston Evening American Night Sports Final, and in tribute to the paper, outstanding figures in public life, including the Governor and Mayor of Boston, will mingle with the sports greats.

Tom Thorp

Entertainment will also play an important role in this gala affair, and an imposing array of talent is now being prepared. Ina Ray Hutton and Shep Fields will be the headliners, with many other well known stage and radio stars promised to round out a grand show.

Yost, 67 Today, Stays on Job

ANN HARBOR, Mich., April 30 (AP) — Fielding H. (Hurry Up) Yost, who made the University of Michigan one of football's strongholds, observed his 67th birthday today, making clear that he has no thought of retirement.

"That time isn't here yet," the veteran director of athletics said, "but it'll come soon enough."

Yost reaches the retirement age for Michigan faculty members in 1941. At that time he must relinquish the directorship he assumed in 1931.

Until then, he said today, his job is to help Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler, new head football coach, lift the Wolverines out of the gridiron doldrums.

"There's still a lot of fight around here," he observed.

Dauber Looms As Real Threat In Derby

(This is another of a series of daily stories introducing the leading three-year-olds of the American turf, which will vie for honors in the Kentucky Derby, next Saturday.)

DAUBER, ch.c. by Pennant-Ship of War, by Man o' War.

Owned by Foxcatcher Farm and trained by Dick Handlin, DAUBER stands a royal chance of taking down the top award in the historic running of the Kentucky Derby a week from today . . . Dauber was purchased by the Foxcatcher Farm at the C. V. Whitney sales last fall for some $27,000 . . . Shipped to the coast this winter, Dauber ran a stellar second to Stagehand in the $50,000 added Santa Anita Derby . . . Dauber was the winner of his Derby trial in Maryland and will find the distance for the Churchill Downs classic right up his alley . . . Dauber's 1937 record includes 15 starts, three firsts, two seconds, and four thirds. His total purse winnings reached $5955 . . . The current season, the Pennant colt has started four times, won once, second twice and third once . . . Dauber is being hailed as one of the horses which Stagehand will have to beat to win the Churchill event. Dauber will be coming at the finish along with Stagehand, and it will be the best at the wire . . . Some shrewd horsemen are already lining up with the Dauber bandwagon . . . Mose Peters will ride the horse in the Derby . . .

(Another of this series Monday.)

Keller Continues Heavy Stick Work

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—Charley Keller, Newark's great outfield prospect, is picking up right where he left off a year ago.

Winner of the 1937 International League batting championship with a .353 mark in 145 games, Keller has jumped into an early lead for the 1938 title as the champion Bears boast a gaudy collective .317 average for their first six games.

Fighting Fox Favorite In Wood

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP) — The $20,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica today finds five Kentucky Derby hopefuls among the nine named for the mile and 70-yard route.

Three of the Derby contingent in the Wood rate high in the future books—William Woodward's Fighting Fox, W. S. Kilmer's Nedayr and Hal Price Headley's Bourbon King, surprise winner of the Chesapeake Stakes.

Myron Selznick's Can't Wait and Mrs. W. P. Stewart's Pasteurized complete the group.

Fighting Fox probably will rule the favorite on the strength of an easy victory in his 1938 debut and fine recent performances by two running mates—Quick Devil and Stormsend from the Wheatley stable.

Nedayr finished third in his first start of the year. Can't Wait showed little in the same race but both figure to improve at the longer distance.

It wouldn't be entirely an upset, however, if a non-Derby eligible led the way home, for in Opera Hat the Woodland farm has a colt that two-roped his field at six furlongs last week.

Jamaica also offers the $5000 six-furlong Jamaica Handicap, featuring Merry Lassie, stablemate of Fighting Fox.

Manhattan Crew Rows W. & L.

NEW YORK, April 30 (AP)—Manhattan's varsity crew, beaten by every opponent it has faced this year, hopes to ring up its first victory today when it meets Washington and Lee on the Harlem.

The Manhattan oarsmen have rowed twice and only the freshmen have made any sort of a showing. The varsity trailed far behind Columbia and Rutgers here April 17 and finished four lengths behind Pennsylvania at Philadelphia last week.

Biscuit's Owner Invited Here

Charles F. Adams, chairman of the board of the Eastern Racing Association, has wired Charles S. Howard a personal invitation to attend the opening of the New England thoroughbred racing season at Suffolk Downs this afternoon.

Howard, owner of the handicap star, Seabiscuit, was not expected to be in Boston until after the running of the match race between his Seabiscuit and War Admiral at Belmont Park May 30.

Adams' invitation appears to have changed Howard's plans, however, and the westerner was expected to be on hand this afternoon.

The Howard stable, headed by Seabiscuit, will be shipped to Suffolk Downs May 31, and the Howard handicap star will be prepared for the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap.

Charles F. Adams, chairman of the board of directors of the Eastern Racing Association, announced that Weston Adams has resigned as a member of the board of directors.

Weston announced that the reason he resigned from the board was because he did not believe any member of the track official family should race horses on the track.

C. F. Adams announced that Arthur G. Wise of Hingham, senior member of the firm of Wise, Hobbe & Seaver of 15 Congress st., dealers in investment securities, was elected Weston's successor.

Robert Defeats Thesz, Claims Mat Title

6000 See Ex-Champ Triumph

By JACK CONWAY

Yvon Robert, French heavyweight, is today demanding that the American Wrestling Association recognize him as world champion as a result of his victory over Louis Thesz, St. Louis Hungarian, in two out of three falls before 6000 persons at the Garden.

"Casey failed to keep his contract to meet me," said Robert, "and so isn't entitled to be recognized as champion.

"I have now beaten Thesz, who was the man the American Wrestling Association originally insisted I should meet."

Thesz won the first fall in 27m., 34s. when he dropped Robert with a chancery over the shoulder after counting with six headlocks.

The second toss was scored by Robert in the fast time of 2m. 1s. Yvon used a grapevine and bar to down the youthful St. Louis grappler.

Louis Thesz

The third fall was gained by Robert in 10m. 32s. The Frenchman used a crotch hold to gain the deciding fall.

It was one of the most brilliant bouts held at the Garden this season.

Thesz used leg locks and headlocks to pave the way for his first toss.

Robert changed his tactics when he returned to the mat. He locked Thesz's arms and legs, and then whirled his opponent around the ring in merry-go-round style.

Robert circled the ring five or six times with Thesz locked in a helpless position, and then pinned the St. Louis youngster.

Robert's aggressiveness gave him the edge in the battle for the deciding toss.

TALUN WINS DEBUT

Wayslaw Talun, Polish heavyweight, knocked off rugged Charley Strack in 3m. 50s. with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Hans Steinke used a reverse body and leg scissors to pin Pat Reilly in 15m.

Seelie Samara pinned Tom Hanley in 14m. 47s. with a top body press.

Chief Saumooke tipped over Joe Swan in 9m. 34s. with a body press, while Peter Gobbon disposed of Freddy Myers in 7m. 7s. with a headlock and body press.

Maurice Robert and Frank Gilardo went 15m. to a draw. Marvin Westenburg and George Clark were on even terms at the end of 20m. of milling.

Tufts Takes on Bowdoin Nine

As Tufts faces Bowdoin on the Tufts Oval this afternoon, Coach Ken Nash is hopeful that his Jumbos will display the same kind of teamwork they showed last Wednesday when they pinned their first major defeat on Boston College at Chestnut Hill.

Sophomore Al Hatch will start the hurling for the Jumbos, and although he has failed to win in two previous starts, he never allowed more than five hits, and only one earned run.

'I'll Coast to Victory,' Raymond Writes Price

Lew Raymond, fast-stepping, fierce-hitting fighter from Baltimore, expects to win convincingly over Merry Mike Kaplan of Dorchester when they meet Monday night at the Boston Arena in the 10-round feature of the Goodwin A. C. ring show.

In a letter to matchmaker Sam Price, Raymond came through with the information that he'll arrive in Boston tomorrow, in great condition, and seemed to imply that he'll coast to a win over the kid from Roxbury.

In fact he went so far as to give it as his opinion that Kaplan may be quite a fellow locally but he's not quite up to his (Raymond's) class in cauliflowerdom.

Merry Mike laughed it all off as Price visited him at the gym today, trying to stir up a bit more hostility between the pair.

Dante Yannetti

Kaplan seldom lets such things or the fellow's reputation or clipping book bother him.

But it will be smart for Raymond not to get into the ring too confident of victory over Kaplan who is likely to hit him with the wildest attack Raymond has been greeted with in his career.

Kaplan is the fastest thing in silk trunks in this vicinity, actually a master boxer for one who has had but two dozen professional fights and hits hard enough and often enough to do plenty of damage.

It will be Dante Yannetti, Chelsea, vs. jolting Joe Glascow, Quincy, in a promising 8-round semifinal.

Frankie Campbell, North End, vs. Irish John Smith, Quincy, and Young Byron, Roxbury, vs. Paris Apice, Providence, are the sixes, while in the opening four Fred Cabral, Cambridge, makes his first local professional start against Eddie Bangs of Boston.

Plan Hearst Boat Marathon

NEW YORK, April 30 (INS)—Final plans for the William Randolph Hearst Albany to New York motorboat marathon will be made at a general meeting of the Middle Atlantic Outboard Association on May 4, officials announced today.

The outboard marathon, which will be staged on the Hudson river, since its inauguration in 1928 has been the sternest challenge the motorboat racing world has had to offer to leading outboard builders and pilots of the country.

An innovation for describing the race has been planned by Jack Brawley, chairman of the broadcasting committee. Brawley has arranged for three cruisers to be posted at various points below Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to inform radio announcers at the finish line by short wave of the progress of the contestants.

Harvard Rows Tech, Rutgers

Pre-race conference between Head Coach Bolles and Captain Chace, Harvard rowing leaders. Chace strokes the Crimson crew against Rutgers and Tech this afternoon on the Charles. There are three sophs in Chace's boat. Hours of drilling on indoor machines will show their benefit today.

SPIKE CHACE TOM BOLLES

Crimson Crews Favored In Regatta on Charles

Harvard's vaunted armada sets its guns on the crews of M. I. T. and Rutgers this afternoon in the Allan Winter Rowe Memorial Cup regatta, to be held on the Charles river.

Four races, all over the Henley distance of one and five-sixteenths miles, with the varsity thrash set for 4:30, will give local waterdogs a "closeup" of Tom Bolles' Crimson eight in action against Cedric Valentine's crack Tech shell and the varsity and Jayvee boats drilled by "Chuck" Logg, Rutgers' mentor. Both Bolles and Logg are University of Washington alumni.

Cedric Valentine

Harvard is favored to capture the varsity and jayvee paddles, and should also win the 150-pound varsity and freshman races, but will find Tech stiff opposition in these latter cruises.

The Crimson varsity will be paced by doughty Captain Jim "Spike" Chase, who set the beat for Harvard's victory over Yale last spring.

Rutgers lost a close race to Princeton last week.

Tech's crack freshman crew, which is reputedly faster than the varsity, will try to get the Beavers off to a good start in the opening race of the regatta, testing the Crimson yearlings.

Tech's shell, coached by Pat Manning, won handily over the Engineer jayvee boat last week.

Three sophomores will be rowing for Harvard in their first test under fire. At the important No. 7 slide, Robinson Stevens, a giant towering six feet three inches, will pass along the beat to his side of the shell.

Schoolboy Does 4:19 At Penn

PHILADELPHIA, April 30 (INS)—A Texas collegian and a New York city schoolboy stole the show as one world record and five meet records were hung up in the first day of the 44th annual Penn relay carnival.

The Texan, Blaine Rideout, turned in a sensational 4:10 anchor mile to help his North Texas Teachers College win the distance medley relay championship of America, in the world record time of 9:59.4.

The New Yorker, Leslie MacMitchell, came through with a 4:19 anchor mile—the fastest mile ever run by a schoolboy anywhere—in a fruitless effort to capture the high school relay championship.

Seton Hall of New Jersey set a new meet record in winning the prep school medley title in 7:41.5.

A few minutes later Overbrook High of Philadelphia won the high school medley title in 7:41. This was the race in which MacMitchell brought his team from eighth place to second.

Pittsburgh, anchored by the great John Woodruff, who ran a 1:49.9 half, set the new college medley sprint record at 3:24.5.

English May Go To N. J. Meet

Outdoor track cannons boom loud and long for the schoolboys today.

The prep, private and high school spikemen have two important meets, the Interscholastic Relay Carnival at the Harvard Stadium and the Worcester Polytech 16th Annual Schoolboy Championship Festival at Worcester.

Officials of the Atlantic City High School Eighth Annual Relay Carnival are seeking an outstanding high school from Boston to compete in their May 28th meet.

Jack Conway, American-Sunday Advertiser sports editor, has been selected by the New Jersey authorities to assist them in picking the Boston team.

A suggestion to Editor Conway: Bill Ohrenberger's Boston English cinder stalwarts would make an excellent choice for that N. J. relay carnival.

The Blue and Blue tracksters were exceptionally powerful during last winter's indoor season and are expected to be just as strong throughout the current outdoor session.

Fifth annual interscholastic golf team championship is to be held on June 9 and 10 at some course on the South Shore. John E. Burke, faculty manager at Peabody High, is chairman.

The largest fleet of college "tars" ever to set sail, will assemble at M. I. T.'s sailing pavilion tomorrow afternoon when the leading skippers of this country and Canada will vie for a leg on the Boston Dinghy Club's challenge cup.

Cornell, Harvard, McGill, Tech, Brown, Dartmouth, Princeton, Yale and other colleges will send their sailors to attempt to wrest the grip of the Tech Engineers on the dinghy trophy.

QUINN SEES FARM OPEN

With his daughter, Margaret, acting as chauffeur, Bob Quinn, President of the Bees, drove to Hartford for the opening game of the Eastern League in the Connecticut Capital city . . . Jack Onslow was also at Hartford looking over some of the boys he sent to his brother, Eddie, who is managing the Laurels . . . Leo Callahan, an old Roxbury boy, who now resides at Oil City, Pa., where he manages a soft ball club, paid a visit to Casey Stengel. Back in 1912, Casey and Leo battled for a berth on the Brooklyn Dodgers, and the present Bees' manager received the nod from Bill Dahlen, who was handling the club then. Callahan started his baseball career as a pitcher at the High school of Commerce, but upon entering professional ball tossed away his toe-plate and became an outfielder . . . Despite the inclement weather, there was a fine turn out yesterday at Wollaston. As usual, the course is in great shape, and starting times are at a premium today . . . The hockey fans around the National League cities are feting Bill Stewart so frequently that the Dorchester "Miracle Man" can't miss winding up with indigestion.—GRIMES.

Class A Relay Meet Feature

While the big guns of the country are shooting at Pennsylvania Relay Carnival records at Philadelphia today, the New England collegiate brethren are enjoying a spot of testing competition of their own at Harvard.

Practically all the local college track and field teams are entered in this second annual New England Relay Carnival.

No New England varsity team made the Philadelphia trip this year, and Holy Cross was alone in the freshman field to try out in the national going.

Naturally, with the Stadium event only a year old, many new records will be forthcoming today.

A year ago Boston College won the mile relay in Class A, but the Eagles will be put to a stern test by Harvard, Holy Cross and Rhode Island State in this afternoon's headliner.

The event today is more a free-for-all than any other college event on the spring calendar. There's no point scoring. Each of the many events is a championship in itself.

There are but five open events listed in the collegiate division, but each of them promises action of the finest.

With freshman and scholastic title competition being held this morning, the day promises to be a full one for those who take their running game seriously.
